Whew! Now that's hot chili!

HARMONY DREW, 7, of Carmel Valley gets a whiff of some three-alarm chili being cooked up at the Carmel Valley Community Youth Center's First Annual Great Chili Cook-Off held Sept. 13 at the Community Park in Carmel Valley Village. Winning the $500 top prize was Rancho Tularcitos. The Coast Ridge Boys and the New Grass Menagerie provided the entertainment for the more than 600 people who showed up to taste chili from 33 entries. It took the four judges, Bill Mollring, Joe Glover of KSBW-TV, CUSD Supt. Bob Infelise, and Michael Fields more than six hours to come up with the winners, obviously a tough choice. Proceeds went to the community youth center. (Holly McFarland photo.)

City staff recommends extending building ban

By NANCY HILLS

A TWO-MONTH extension of the urgency ordinance banning any construction affecting water use will be the staff recommendation to the Carmel City Council next week.

In a special council meeting 10 a.m. Monday, Sept. 22 in the Carmel City Council chambers, the council is scheduled to consider re-establishing a 45-day urgency ordinance that put a stop to the city issuing permits of any kind that affect a change in water use. The moratorium includes business licenses and building and use permits.

According to City Administrator Doug Schmitz, the staff will recommend the ordinance be extended another two months to give the city more time to gather information on water use and determine whether the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District will increase the city's water allocation.

The council first approved the ordinance in a special meeting on Aug. 11 after the water district informed the council the city was within 99.99 percent of its annual water allocation. If Carmel exceeds its 1,031 ac. ft. yearly water allotment in the 12 months from July 1 to June 30 — the water year — the district will stop setting water meters in the city.

The water district is also considering a change in the yearly allocation review, using a continuous 12-month total rather than the set 12 months between July and June. If the district does change its process, Carmel could be put under a water permit moratorium after exceeding its allocation during any 12-month period.

To avoid a water district-imposed moratorium, the council approved the 45-day urgency ordinance to keep water demand at status quo until the city had time to consider additional means to lower water consumption and define under what circumstances new permits can be issued.

•

BOTH SCHMITZ and Planning Director Diane White explained the staff will recommend extending the urgency ordinance because the city needs more information on its water use.

Carmel has received only one month's water use figures — those for July — since the moratorium was established, Schmitz said, and they would like to see more to help determine water use patterns.

Also, the city has formally requested the water district increase the city's allocation and is still waiting for the district's ruling.

The water district board could vote on the request in October, but after Carmel's presentation during the district board meeting on Sept. 8, water board chairman Dick Heuer said that due to the complexity of the city's request, it will probably take longer.

Carmel had suggested the district increase the amount of water it allows to be pumped and showed charts and graphs demonstrating where errors were made in the original allocation process.

The ordinance, as it now reads, states that:

- The city must be below 98 percent of its allocation for three months before permits will be issued.
- The city decrease its water consumption two percent each year for five years, culminating with a 10 percent reserve. The moratorium will be reset whenever water use begins to use that year's water reserve.

As a part of the city's program to reduce water consumption, Carmel purchased 200 ultra-low flow toilets to sell, at cost, to residents and businesses within the village. The city hopes to encourage hotels and homes to use the toilets which consume only 1.5 gallons per flush.

As an urgency measure, the ordinance can be extended for a maximum of a year. Carmel already has a similar ordinance, approved last year, that prohibits any commercial development or new businesses which increase water consumption at its proposed location and aims to establish a 10 percent water reserve.

The urgency ordinance, however, has the additional mandate of the moratorium, accelerates the time schedule for establishing a reserve and affects residential as well as commercial development.

•

A PARTIAL list of large projects currently within the city permit process that cannot be completed due to the moratorium include Mayor Clint Eastwood's proposed office/retail building on San Carlos Street next to the Hog's Breath Inn; the Freschi condominiums on Junipero Avenue; Robert D'Isidoro's three-building two-story office/apartment development on Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets; and the Little family remodel of the Sands Motel/Simpson's Restaurant on the corner of San Carlos Street and Fifth Avenue.

There are also numerous residential permits on hold while the moratorium continues.

Though only Eastwood's building was scheduled to start construction this fall, the other developments could be held up if the moratorium continues for a full year.

Also on the agenda for the special meeting are:

- A transfer of funds to pay for the city's upcoming week-long 70th birthday celebration in October. Plans include a pancake breakfast, a vintage 1916 bathing beauty contest, a one-man show about Father Junipero Serra, a party and the annual Halloween parade. The council is also considering paying $4,200 for a fireworks display, though Eastwood stated that it was "odd" the city would have fireworks for its own birthday celebration, but ban them on the Fourth of July.
- Consideration of an agreement between the city and the Pine Inn regarding architectural services for a joint parking facility.
- Receive a report on tour buses from Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, who spent a week counting and observing bus activity on Junipero Avenue by Carmel Plaza.
- Award a bid for resurfacing Rio Road.
- Consider aesthetic improvements around the newly-opened public restrooms on the corner of Mission Street and Sixth Avenue.

Pleasing privy

Dear Editor:

It seems to me that the time has come to acclaim the architect who designed our new public toilet building at Devendorf Park — and the builders, as well!

Think about it: such an assignment for an architect is neither glamorous nor easy. Dimensions are relatively fixed, layout is quite prescribed. In this case, however, a handsome small building has been produced. The slight inward slant of the walls gives the structure stability and uniqueness. The roof beams, cut at the ends and painted add a charming touch. Our mayor's gift of the Carmel stone certainly enhances the structure, but the basic design is, in my opinion, most pleasing!

Designing and building the Taj Mahal wasn't easy. However, many more options and considerably more budget was available to those who put up that structure. Given the limitations of design inherent in a public toilet building, our people have done a great job!

20th Century is here

Dear Editor:

Praise Ken Fadem! His letter in the Pine Cone (Aug. 28) in answer to Ben Heller was brilliant — as is all his writing. I enjoyed his articles in the Pine Cone dealing with the recent election and other matters. This current letter is stunningly written, and what's more, gives, as usual, vivid and clear insight into the real substance of the discussion.

I hope Ben Heller — and others — reads and re-reads. It's a fact, folks, as Mr. Fadem suggests, the 20th century is here! Make the best of it.

Excellent coverage

Dear Editor:

As one of the 20 people who went to Washington as part of the delegation sent by the Friends of the Big Sur Coast to fight S.2159, the Wilson bill that would federalize some 70 miles of the coast, I want you to know that I appreciated Michael Gardner's Behind the Lines column in your Aug. 28 issue.

There is just one point that should be cleared up, however. While it is true that only five or six of the press attended our press conference, at dawn, in the Mansfield Room of the Capitol (and getting that room was a coup in itself), the story we had to tell did have excellent press coverage through the efforts of Donna Marek, as our media relations director. Prior to the trip, Donna obtained television coverage by five stations, including that by CNN which was picked up by the network. Articles also appeared in The Herald, The Cambrian, and the Pine Cone, including the wonderfully encouraging editorial you did about sending back the "A Team."

Coverage of our appearance at the subcommittee hearing was carried by four TV stations and seven newspapers, and was picked up by the McClatchey and AP wireservices. That is really excellent coverage of what is unfortunately considered a fairly minor issue back in Washington, particularly when we were competing with major issues like the Rhenquist Chief Justice hearings, sanctions against South Africa, and grain sales to Russia.

The importance of the coverage, of course, is that now, thanks to Donna, a great many more people realize the federalization of the Big Sur Coast is not a minor issue. Wilson's philosophy of environmentally incompetent local and state government has widespread ramifications, and his preference for big government interference where it is not needed has major implications in all aspects of federal vs state and local jurisdiction.

Your coverage of the Wilson attempt to take Big Sur as a bloody feather in his political cap has been excellent. The analysis of the legislation written by Ken Fadem was better than anything even the Friends have written. Mac McDonald's editorials and Mike Gardner's stories have shown real insight into what the bill is really all about.

We are grateful to you.

No on Bird

Dear Editor:

Chief Justice Rose Bird put on a good show at the broadcasters convention. She does seem to be confused about people and voters. She asked the broadcasters to do a better job of explaining the work of the court. I believe that the broadcasters and newspapers have already done a good job of that.

Proponents for Bird point out that the voters have never failed to reconfirm a supreme court justice. So what! Our state consititution provides that we have that option and now is the time for a first.

I agree with her proponents that the courts should be free from interference of politicians when rendering judgments. The courts are not free from the people and politicians at voting time. I feel that politicians have the right, as well as everyone else, to influence the voters.

The record shows that not even one heinous criminal has been executed, regardless of the severity of the crime, since Jerry Brown appointed Bird to the court.

A robber requires his victims to assume the kneeling position and shoots them through the head. His doing this does not convince the Bird court that he had intent to kill. Really, a demented idiot would understand that the robber intended to kill.

The Bird court has used every subterfuge to prevent lawful executions. We, the voters can change that this November. Vote no on Justices Bird, Grodin and Reynoso. It's time, too, to put Justice Mosk out to pasture.

Out of line

Dear Editor:

While visiting your lovely town recently I coincidentally saw the Honorable Mayor Eastwood just as he was driving into the city hall parking lot as I was passing city hall. I started to approach his car when he waved his hand out of his car window and very firmly said: "No! No! No thank you!"

I was quite put off by this, to say the least. As a movie star I can understand his wanting to ward off a potential autograph seeker, but as an elected public servant I think your mayor's actions were out of line. He had no way of knowing whether or not I was a Carmel resident wanting to ask him about a local issue or an out of town autograph seeker. I certainly wouldn't expect my Mayor Bradley waving away someone approaching him in this manner.

Clint Eastwood certainly didn't make my day!

Fox in the henhouse?

Sending Alan Williams builder/developer to the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board as a representative of Carmel to ask for an increase in Carmel's water allocation is a little like sending the fox to guard the hen house.

Enough is enough

OUR MAYOR said something recently that a lot of people have been privately hoping he would: "Enough is enough."

Mayor Clint Eastwood has gently, but forcefully, asked that local businesses phase out the merchandising of his name on everything from T-shirts and sweatshirts to coffee mugs and toddler's clothes.

For a while, especially during the excitement of the election campaign, those items brought a certain sense of humor and imagination to the campaign, as well as a great deal of money to the then-financially ailing Carmel Youth Center. "Clint for Mayor" buttons and bumper stickers were necessary, even traditional, items during the heated election campaign. You could tell who supported who by their button or bumper sticker (or perhaps lack of same). Those items stimulated debate, founded alliances and friendships, even served as decoration or fashion accessories for some.

But the election is over, Eastwood is mayor now, has been for more than five months if you haven't been counting, and the Carmel Youth Center is healthy once again, financially solvent and under the wing of the city, with a new director being sought at this moment. Carmel is not Clintville, or Clintstown or Clintville-by-the-Sea, or any other ridiculous monniker. "It's Carmel-by-the-Sea, thank you," as the mayor himself says.

It was becoming almost embarrassing to walk down Ocean Avenue and see the proliferation of Clint paraphernalia ranging from the silly to the downright tasteless. Granted there were some "quality" items being offered by some merchants, but by and large most of them belonged more on the boardwalk at Atlantic City than on the streets of Carmel.

The whole thing started to scrape gratingly on the bottom of the barrel when two businesses took each on in court over the use of the mayor's good name. It's great to have pride in our city and its mayor, but we don't need to plaster his name and image on practically anything that will sell, or sue each other over the use — or in this case, misuse — of his name.

In addition, contributing "part" of the proceeds to the youth center is no justification for selling schlock. To its credit the business community appears to be going along with the mayor's wishes. But, there are a few who continue to hide behind that rationale, defending their actions while attempting to buy some kind of legitimacy by giving to "charity."

There are other — and better — sources of funding for the youth center as evidenced by the Monterey Golf Foundation's recent donation of $50,000 to help in remodeling and rebuilding costs at the center.

It's time to start exploring these other sources insteading of continuing to cash in on the mayor's fame in the name of "charity."

•

IF YOU haven't heard yet or haven't noticed, Michael Gardner appears less and less in these pages. There's a good reason for that. Gardner is headed onwards and upwards with a new job as a reporter for the Chico Enterprise-Record, a 30,000 circulation daily in Northern California.

Gardner, as you loyal readers may recall, has been with the Pine Cone for more than five years and wrote the bulk of the newspaper, covering everything from city hall and board of supervisors to activities at local schools, with photographs to boot. He was particularly adept at covering land use planning and zoning issues, winning a few statewide awards in the process.

Taking his place, but not quite filling his shoes just yet, will be David Leland (who is covered in more depth elsewhere in this issue).

Mike has played a significant part with the Pine Cone the past five years — we have jokingly called him a "news hound" — and all of us here wish him the best of luck in his new job...We're going to miss him.

Planners grapple over status of Odello East

By MICHAEL GARDNER

WHEN HEARINGS resume on the Carmel Valley Master Plan Environmental Impact Report (EIR) next month, the key issue will be whether to include the Odello East farmland in the planning area boundaries.

The Monterey County Planning Commission, following nearly a month delay because the consultant needed more time to respond to comments in the EIR, will begin another round of public hearings on Oct. 8.

Commissioners are scheduled to make a recommendation to the board of supervisors, which has final authority on certification of the EIR.

Then commissioners will launch a review of the master plan itself and make recommendations to supervisors for approval.

The master plan and accompanying environmental impact report then will have to be submitted to Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver for a final stamp of approval. Silver has issued a moratorium on most discretionary use permits until a new development plan is approved.

Planning commissioners earlier this month professed some confusion over whether the Odello property on the east side of Highway 1 just south of Carmel River should be included in the master plan.

The Odellos had gone to court along with a property owner in High Meadow to seek exclusion from the draft master plan, which contains numerous proposed development-controlling provisions that include an allocation system severely restricting the number of new lots of record within the planning area.

Judge Silver, who voided the master plan in 1984, ruled that the High Meadow property could be excluded, but the Odello site would remain within the master plan planning area.

However, the Odellos and their consultant, Denise Duffy and Associates, contend that Silver's ruling just means that the county has to consider the cumulative effects of the development in the EIR and not include the physical boundaries.

In attempt to clear the confusion, the Pine Cone called Judge Silver. However, Silver refused to comment because he will later have to determine whether the master plan and EIR should be certified.

WHETHER THE Odello East property should be included in the Carmel Valley Master Plan will be a major topic when the Monterey County Planning Commission continues its public hearings on the environmental impact report Oct. 8. (Holly McFarland photo.)

If the Odello site is excluded from the master plan, then the development would not be subject to the allocation system. That system is expected to only allow about 45 units annually. Each project will have to compete for the allocation under environmental merits such as its effects on traffic, water and views.

•

THE ODELLOS want to develop 54 acres of the property into a 162-unit subdivision, including a farmer's market and restaurant. The Odellos will continue to farm artichokes on the site as well.

Monterey County Counsel Jose Ramos, who argued and lost the county's case against the city that forced the rewriting of the master plan, recommends that the Odello property remain within its boundaries.

Ramos told commissioners at their first hearing on the master plan that it is "necessary" to keep the Odellos in the plan. He pointed out that it would be "difficult" and an "additional burden" on the county to get Silver to OK the plan without the Odello property.

Commissioner David Hendrick agreed, saying that, "There's no point in stirring up Judge Silver and he gets stirred up rather easily."

Commissioner Calvin Reaves then asked Planning Director Robert Slimmon for advice. Slimmon answered that the Odello property is a policy decision best left up to commissioners and supervisors, not staff.

"That's your recommendation to the board. It's not a factual matter. It's a judgmental matter," Slimmon said.

At that first hearing, commissioners did not make any decision and will consider the Odello issue when they address the draft EIR Oct. 8.

The key argument from the Odellos is that their property already lies within the boundaries of the Carmel Area Land Use Plan, which means they must not only get county approval, but also go before the California Coastal Commission.

"Inclusion of the Odello property in the Carmel Valley Master Plan could create conflicts and redundancies among the various governing plans and policies," wrote Denise Duffy in her comments on the draft EIR.

"For example," she continued, "clustering development is encouraged in the Carmel Area Land Use plan and discouraged in the Carmel Valley Master Plan."

Duffy contends that there would be "no significant land use impacts" by excluding the Odello property "given that the densities would be the same for both plans, and that both plans offer protective policies regarding development in the areas of visual resources, environmentally sensitive habitats, water and marine resources, geological hazards, transportation and land use development."

•

HOWEVER, Duffy neglects to point out that the Carmel Area Land Use Plan would allow for all the development at once, rather than phased as is the requirement under the master plan.

Projects that are phased usually have less immediate impact, giving time for mitigation measures to be developed.

Duffy acknowleges in her comments that the development will create more traffic, but contends that the impact will not be lessened by inclusion in the master plan.

"Given similar densities for the project, there would be no impact from excluding the Odello property from the Carmel Valley Master Plan to the Carmel Valley area since the major impact from project-related traffic would be felt on Carmel area road systems, not on the Carmel Valley road system.

And since the density would be the same under the master plan or LUP, Duffy argued that the impacts on water supply would be negligible.

City to review ongoing 'second kitchen' issue

By NANCY HILLS

ON CARMEL'S honor roll of ongoing, in-limbo problems, second kitchens might even beat the records set by parking lots and library annexes.

Undaunted, the city plans to tackle the sensitive question once again when the General Plan Committee finishes its review of the housing element and the second kitchen ordinance.

The committee is currently drafting recommendations on legalizing second kitchens, which it calls "subordinate units," as a part of the committee's ongoing review of Carmel's general plan conducted 3 p.m. every Friday in Carmel City Council chambers. The committee plans to finish its discussions on subordinate units this Friday and be ready to present recommendations to the city council Oct. 7.

Illegal subordinate units comprise a significant portion of the rental and affordable housing units in Carmel, but whether or not to legalize and/or how to accomplish that task has been a much debated subject for years.

Subordinate units are usually defined as an attached or detached room or unit with a sink, stove and refrigerator or a rented room within the household. The planning department estimates there are approximately 250 to 300 such units in the city, many illegally constructed or converted from rooms in the main home or detached garages on the property.

The illegal units became a major point during 1986 mayoral race when now-Mayor Clint Eastwood, then a candidate, criticized an ordinance drafted last year by the former planning commission that then languished in limbo without approval of the city council. "Gestapo ordinance" was Eastwood's term for the law because of its of stringent requirements for continual inspections and rent control.

Those provisions have been eliminated from the general plan committee recommendations and the ordinance they will send to the council does not include the rent control restrictions which required financial statements from tenants and continual inspections of the property.

•

THOUGH SUBJECT to change as committee members continue their discussions, a rough draft has been developed of an ordinance designed at legalizing existing subordinate units and providing rules for future development.

Within the ordinance, as it now reads, the committee has divided subordinate units into four classes:

- Class A: a single room or rooms sharing common kitchen facilities in a primary residence.
- Class B: A single room or rooms with a small portable kitchen, such as a hot plate and refrigerator, within a primary residence.
- Class C: A single room or rooms with complete and independent living facilities, including a kitchen with sink. These units can be either attached or detached to the primary residence on the property.
- Class D: Any of the above units established because of a hardship. The committee has determined the planning commission should define the parameters of "hardship," but the definition will probably include circumstances such as an illness where a companion, nurse or aide is required on the premises. It could also include units for parents that need to move in with their children. This type of unit would be abated when the hardship ends.

•

COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATONS also include different standards and regulations for existing and new units.

For existing subordinate units, the committee recommends:

- An amnesty period of 90 days to allow owners of existing units to obtain a permit.
- Existing units which receive a permit during that time would not be required to meet zoning regulations on lot coverage, parking requirements or pay initial permit fees. However, the units will be inspected and have to meet minimum health and safety requirements. Owners would have three months to comply with the standard.
- Owners that do not register their units during the amnesty period will have to pay a fee of $50 to file for a permit and meet new unit standards.
- Only one unit can be rented on the property, and the other must be owner-occupied or vacant, with the exception of Class A. There can be two Class A or one Class A and one Class B type of housing on the property.
- The permit must be renewed annually with a fee of $10.

The committee has tentatively agreed that a limit of 500 units in Carmel is sufficient, leaving some leeway for additional new units in the village. The new units, in addition to meeting existing unit requirements, would have to:

- Meet existing zoning laws as well as building, health and safety standards.
- Provide one parking space on the property for each Class B and Class C unit.
- Pay an initial filing fee as well as the annual renewal.
- No additional construction on the street facade of the existing structure.

Once the 500 limit is reached, residents who need a subordinate unit can apply for a "hardship" permit.

Redwoods league buys 40-acre grove for Big Sur state park

THE SAVE-the-Redwoods League recently purchased a 40-acre Redwood grove in Big Sur to be added to the Julia Pfeiffer Burns State Park.

The acquisition of the grove was completed with the assistance of the Monterey Chapter of the Audubon Society and the Big Sur Land Trust.

The parcel, located on the eastern boundary of the park in upper Partington Creek Canyon, will provide additional parkland for recreational uses such as hiking, and will provide long-term protection for the old-growth Redwoods downstream in the park.

The grove is heavily forested with old-growth Redwoods, tan oak, madrone and California Laurel.

The San Francisco-based Save-the-Redwoods League has been purchasing and protecting Redwood groves for more than 68 years. With the support of its members and contributors the organization has donated more than $45 million to protect 255,000 acres of Redwood land now protected in 31 California state parks and in the Redwood National Park.

Skateboarders run into big liability obstacle

By DAVID LELAND

SOMETIMES WHAT appears to be a good idea in theory lacks success on a pragmatic level — such was the case Monday when city safety officals met with Carmel skateboarders in an effort to see if the two sides can work together.

The meeting was called in reponse to the city council's warning (Sept. 2) that unless skateboarders began to act in accordance with city's laws, skateboarding would be banned throughout the city. Skateboarding is already banned in Carmel's business district.

Lt. Don Fuselier, representing the Carmel Police Department, described the business district as having "marked parking stalls."

"We are asking the kids to comply with the law and use common sense," Fuselier said.

Skateboarders are governed by the same laws as pedestrians, Fuselier said. "You don't ride in the middle of the street and you don't step out in front of cars."

About 10 youths showed up for the meeting at the Carmel Youth Center, which is a small percentage of the city's skateboarders. Some estimate the number of skateboarders at about 350.

Nonetheless, the kids had the interest to try and reach an agreement with Carmel — unfortunately they did not understand the complex problems which surround liability insurance.

Instead of concentrating on how to cope with the city council's warning, the skateboarders voiced repeated interests in an area sanctioned for skateboard use.

They suggested a city park, privately-owned vacant lots, quiet streets and even a ramp installed at the beach.

For each idea they received the same answer: "You can't get insurance."

"They used to be able to skateboard at the youth center," said Merv Sutton, recreation committee board member. "But the insurance company said if it sees them (skateboarding) again they will cancel our insurance."

Even if parents sign a waiver which absolved the youth center of any responsibility there could not be any skateboarding.

"Waivers are illegal in California," Fuselier said.

But this logic did not have much effect on the eager skateboarders. One youth announced that he didn't have any money so there would be no reason to sue him.

This prompted fire department representative Chuck August to announce: "The odds of acquiring a skateboard park (in Carmel) are non-existent."

•

ONCE THE question of what the skateboarders cannot do was brought to light, the options fizzled somewhat.

One bright spot, however, was the formation of a skateboard club. The club, which is not affiliated with the youth center, will deal with guidelines for young skateboarders, said Jeff Bell, youth center director.

Jonas Rowe was elected president of the newly-formed club.

But besides the formation of the club, just how to deal safely with a dangerous situation remains unclear.

"Three times over the past 15 years I have had to tell parents that their child will not be coming home, ever," Fuselier said. "I would rather be a bad guy and be called all sorts of names than have to do that again."

Fuselier said he plans to take his talk into Carmel High and Carmel Middle schools in an attempt to establish some safety measures for the area's skateboaders.

It is up to the kids to keep skateboarding legal, said August, engineer on the Carmel Fire Department.

"The parents have given their kids responsibility," he said. "They (the kids) need to exercise it. Jumping chains downtown and hitting cars with their skateboards is not responsible."

Fuselier cited one instance of a young skateboarder lying down on his skateboard and riding underneath a semitruck in the downtown area of Carmel.

As a last resort, if the problem is not solved, there are two possible remedies — a total ban on skateboards in the city and issuing citations, Fuselier said.

A ban is not uncommon, August said. Recently the city of Mendocino drove skateboarders from its streets. But both August and Fuselier said were trying not to use this method.

More realistically the next step would be citing the unlawful skateboarders with an infraction, which carries with it a fine of $15.

"They'll have to cite," said skateboarder Chris Hartzell. "For every one of us that's in this room there will be 20 that will just shoot down the road anyway."

Spanish Bay resort slowly rising from dunes

By DAVID LELAND

LIKE AN oasis, holes seven, eight and nine provide a stark contrast to the grey cement and cold steel girders at the Spanish Bay resort project in Pebble Beach.

The three smooth, green fairways of the proposed 6,870-yard championship golf course are about the only completed items at the controversial resort hotel and condominium complex.

The 270-room hotel is still an empty shell with an estimated completion date of fall 1987, which will mark about three years since Pebble Beach Co. began negotiations with Monterey County to build at Spanish Bay.

"Basically we're doing pretty good considering the delays in architect designs," said Tom Tierney, assistant project superintendent.

In order to conform with the county and the California Coastal Commission, the Pebble Beach Co. has been forced to keep its plans in line with strict building limitations.

The luxury hotel, for instance, will only be three stories tall; the first level is called the "fairway" level, which makes the building appear to only have two floors.

The restrictions also resulted in the peak of the 5,750 square foot, 820-person Grand Ballroom being removed.

Also included in Phase I of the Spanish Bay project will be the completion of a 24,000 square foot clubhouse building which will house retail shops and golf course pro shop.

Tierney pointed out that the walls are constructed of steel girders with no definite partitions between rooms.

"Once they decide who the tenants are the space will be divided up," he said.

Phase II, however, has no completion date. In fact, there are really no definite plans for the condominium phase of the project.

But this is not deterring potential buyers.

"We have a list of 300 people interested in purchasing a condominium," Tierney said.

In the meantime a conveyor belt spits sand delivered from nearby Sawmill Gulch which fills in the uneven ground where the condominiums will be built.

Tierney said the belt delivers between 6,000-7,000 cubic yards each day and has brought in a grand total of 70,000 cubic yards. About 530,000 cubic yards of sand will be needed to complete the project.

The conveyor belt was installed despite repeated pleas from residents of Pacific Grove's Del Monte Park neighborood were heard.

Recently Del Monte Park residents appeared satisfied with the Pebble Beach Co.'s efforts to contain noise and maintain safety codes. Several public hearings were held by Monterey County Board of Supervisors to hear residents' complaints about the conveyor belt.

In accordance with its agreement with the board of supervisors, the Pebble Beach Co. has undertaken the task of replanting the areas where it has removed natural habitat.

This includes hydroseeding the dunes with native plant seedlings such as California beach poppies, pink sand verbena, lizard tail and yellow bush lupine.

In addition to the smaller plant life, the Pebble Beach Co. will also replace any trees it has removed on a "one-to-one" basis.

In order to accomplish this task, biologists are cloning mature trees to reproduce new trees of the exact genetic constitution. While the new trees are not exact replicas in appearance, they are genetically identical to the tree from which the cutting was made, thereby saving the genetic value of the Monterey Pine.

Just how the additional traffic will be routed to Spanish Bay from Highway 68 is still up in the air, according to Pebble Beach Co. representative Candy Ingram.

It is estimated that there will be about 100 trips each day from Spanish Bay on Highway 68, with 60 cars heading towards Pacific Grove and 40 going south to Highway 1. This will impact the southern route with 3,600 cars per year, Ingram said.

"The Pebble Beach Co. has been talking with the county," she said. "By mutual agreement we are looking to delay road improvement until two years after the hotel opening for better assessment."

Under current conditions of the building permit, the Pebble Beach Co. is required to build a gate at Haul Road off a straight stretch of Highway 68 near the western edge of the Presidio of Monterey.

The new gate would allow cars direct access to Spanish Bay. There is, however, a question of what to do with the intersection there, whether to signalize it or utilize an overpass-underpass configuration. Pacific Grove and Monterey officials argue that to put a signal there would slow or halt the flow of traffic on the much-used highway.

Pebble Beach Co. officals estimate that, upon completion of the project, Spanish Bay will generate $19.5 million per year in economic benefit to the local economy.

In addition to visitor spending, Spanish Bay will also create 275 permanent jobs at the resort and more than 900 jobs in the tourism sector of the economy.

CUSD administrators going back to school

By DAVID LELAND

ALL OF Carmel Unified School District's principals, plus its superintendent and assistant superintendent, will begin leadership training this year in an effort to sharpen the school district's focus on curriculum.

The 12 administrators will take part in the California School Leadership Academy, a state-financed program geared to increase instructional leadership skills.

"This program will develop, hone and shape skills in the management process," said Bob Infelise, superintendent of schools.

The CUSD board unanimously approved a resolution Sept. 16 to take part in the three-year program.

Under the terms of the agreement, administrators will spend a total of 15 days a year attending classes in either Monterey or Santa Cruz training centers. Infelise assured the board that this would not interfere with the running of the district's schools.

"The (administrators') schedules will be staggered," he said. "There will also be five or six days of classes offered in the summer."

The 1986-87 calander of training includes six-and-a-half days when school is in session, several late afternoon sessions, four days the last week of June and three days during the first or second week of August.

The only cost to the school district will be incidental expenses such as food and travel compensation, according to Vance Baldwin, assistant superintendent of schools.

•

ULTIMATELY IT will be the students who benefit from the leadership training course which, according to Caroll Knipe, South Bay training center director, has a target of producing successful students.

Knipe praised the CUSD in its commitment to the program in sending all of its adminsitrators to the training classes.

"This is absolutely unique," she said. "It's very forward looking on the part of Carmel. It's what we dreamed of happening."

The training program came about as the result of a senate bill aimed at raising educational standards and standardizing the state's curriculum. While participation in the program is optional, administrators would be wise to seize the opportunity, Knipe said.

"The California Assessment Program Test (CAP) will be based on curriculum taught in our training program," she said.

This will mark the first year for the implementation of the administrative training program.

"This is revolutionary," she said. "There has never been a statewide curriculum for school administrators."

The first year deals with how the administrator can bring about "vision, leverage and culture change" within the school, Knipe said.

The administrators will watch video tapes, read current research and learn how to apply the research to an actual situation.

In other words, Knipe said, the adminstrator will set a direction for his school. In Carmel's case, the entire district will move forward in the same direction.

"They will basically look at different ways of instructing students so they can learn better," Knipe said.

Former Carmel High School Principal Marsha Kading-Kelly will be teaching the training segment on instruction.

"We will be refreshing administrators on instructional strategy," she said, "so they can work with teachers."

Kading-Kelly is one of 16 instructors in the South Bay training center, one of 11 statewide centers.

The trainers undergo intensive courses plus preparation days in order to become qualified, Knipe said.

The second year of instruction will look at leadership and support, while the final year will have the administrators actually doing a school improvement plan.

"Hopefully they will work with the schools all along," Knipe said. "But now they can put it into action."

College deans to hold program on applications

A GROUP of five college admissions deans will hold a program to discuss the college application porcess at 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 20 at the Carmel High School library.

The group, which has travelled the West Coast for the past several years presenting programs to high schools, will discuss the admission process at selective independent colleges. They will give a 45-60 minute presentation on application procedures, the decision process, financial aid, campus visits, the interview and other issues dealing with the admissions process.

Each dean will be available to provide specific information about his respective institutions.

Deans include William Hartog of Washington & Lee University, Lexington, Va.; William Elliott, Carnegie-Mellon University, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Kenneth Nourse, Union College, Schenectady, N.Y.; Fred F. Neuberger, Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt.; and Miles Uhrig of Tufts University, Medford, Mass.

All interested parents and students are invited to attend. For more information contact Carmel High School College/Career Center at 625-HELP.

Planners will review controversial seawall

By NANCY HILLS

IT'S CRAIG McFarland's seawall again.

The "new" Carmel Planning Commission will get a chance during its next meeting to review a controversial fiberform seawall protecting the the bluffs below McFarland's home on the north end of Carmel beach.

The meeting starts at 3 p.m., one hour earlier than usual, Wednesday, Sept. 24 in Carmel City Council Chambers.

McFarland appealed to the city council in August a decision made last year by the former commissioners to require an enviromental impact report (EIR) before it would consider any further work on the structure. The council decided to send the matter back to the current planning commission.

The planning commission required an EIR when McFarland applied to the city last October for a permit to do extensive repairs on the seawall. Hastily built after the severe storms of 1983-1984, inspections found that 80 feet of the structure was without a foundation on its northern end, next to Pescadero Canyon. While the rest of the structure sits on bedrock, that portion rests only on unstable sand and gravel.

Bestor Engineers, the company that originally constructed the seawall, submitted plans to place 2- to 3-ton rocks half above and half under the 80-foot section. The rocks, Bestor Engineers claim, would deflect the wave action and hold the sand serving as a foundation in place.

However, the city staff and planning commission expressed concern about the seaward movement of the rocks during their settling period, the continual need to add more stones as that process continued and the stability of the wall in general. Those concerns prompted the commission to demand an EIR before work could proceed. It is that decision the present planning commission will reconsider.

In another agenda item, the commission will conduct the final design review of Robert D'Isidoro office/apartment two-story development for the Grunion Run property on Fourth Street between San Carlos and Mission streets.

During the final design review, the commissioners will approve or deny materials, landscaping, and architectural detailing on the project.

The project consists of three buildings ranging from one to two stories with an underground garage.

Help! I'm being held prisoner by a road gang!

By ROBERT E. FENTON

HELP! I'M being held prisoner in my home by a road construction crew. All egress has been sealed off and any attempt to use the road means that I will be immersed in a slurry of liquid asphalt. Either way, I'm stuck.

I live in a pleasant residential area on a smooth street with concrete gutters and curbs, all of which seemed to be in excellent condition. Then, one morning last weekend a notice came in the mail stating that the street would be closed two days hence and that I'd better get my car the hell out of the way or it would be towed off at the owner's expense. Sure enough, in comes the heavy equipment, along with several guys wielding shovels. They toss a lot of loose asphalt around and then disappear. The stuff sticks to our tires and our shoes, and ends up in the garage and house.

Now, if you live on a pockmarked street with ribbons of patchwork over the often exhumed pipelines and it boasts washboards unlimited, you have no worries about road repair people showing up. Your road will never be in danger of receiving any attention whatsoever. How do I know this? Well, in order to go very far from my home I have to use a route down a road that is so bad it takes broken-field driving to negotiate. That street has yet to be given so much as a cursory glance by any road maintenance person. Meanwhile, this is the second time in a year that the skip loader has shown up in front of my house.

I don't want to sound like a whiner and, in fact, being trapped at home is not the reason I am protesting. It is just that I cannot fathom how the decisions are made as to which road, gets the attention. Road engineers and maintenance men have been analyzing and prioritizing for years, and they must have some rationale for their decisions. The problem is that it's difficult to discern their sage reasoning while waiting behind a flagman. If only the construction notice had given a clue.

"Your street will receive a cosmetic workover Tuesday next, because it is the end of the fiscal year and we have money left over."

Or, "In three days the road construction crew will be conducting a training exercise in your area, operation "Heavy Crude." You are, hereby, warned to keep all vehicles out of sight until dark."

Or, "Because of the political clout of certain residents in your area, we will be giving your street excessive attention at the expense of ignoring several streets much more deserving of our efforts."

Notices, such as these, would ease frustration and do wonders for public relations. People who had to park their cars a half mile from home would understand and those black on orange "Prepare to Stop" signs would lose their mystique.

Here they come again. I can hear the "tink" from the hubcap bell of a backing dump truck and I can only hope that my request for information is relayed to the proper authorities soon. Incidentally, if you wish to send a CARE package, I understand that my street is now going to be re-named, La Brea-something or other. Hurry.

(Editor's Note: Robert E. Fenton, who calls himself a "freelance writer living in Carmel," is a property and fine arts appraiser and former president of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees.

KICKING UP a storm of dust and gravel this city street sweeper makes its appointed rounds during a recent street resurfacing project in Carmel, something that has a few residents nonplussed and others a little peeved, according to Robert Fenton, who was caught in the middle of all this. THE YMCA of the Monterey Peninsula needs volunteer coaches and referees for the YMCA Youth Soccer Leagues, including the Carmel Youth Soccer League.

Experience is helpful, but not necessary, according to YMCA organizers. The YMCA will teach the finer points of the game through Carlos Volpini, a native of Argentina who has played on his national team as well as having 12 years of professional experience.

All interested persons should contact the YMCA at 373-4167, or stop by the YMCA at 600 Camino El Estero in Monterey. The soccer season starts Saturday, Sept. 20 and runs through the first week of December.

Carmel Youth Center gets a $50,000 donation

By DAVID LELAND

THANKS TO a healthy donation by the Monterey Golf Foundation, the Carmel Youth Center will be getting a facelift, according to youth center president Ron Faia.

The $50,000 donation, which will be used for "capital improvements," came after Faia was advised by Mayor Clint Eastwood to write a letter to the Monterey Golf Foundation outlining why money was needed.

The Monterey Golf Foundation oversees the proceeds from the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-Am golf tournament (formerly the Bing Crosby Pro-Am). The money is donated to a long list of peninsula charities.

Shortly after Faia wrote the letter, which cited a leaky roof, a new paint job, dry rot on the gym floor and kitchen renovation, he received the $50,000 donation.

"The reason for the big check is because of the washout," Faia said, referring to the rain-shortened 1986 tournament. "Because of the rain we had a bad year with food concessions." This year the youth center netted about $16,000 in food sales compared with last year's $35,000.

Besides a bad year with food concession, Carmel Martin, a Bing Crosby Youth Fund board member, said tradition helped.

"There is a long history between the youth center and the golf tournament," he said. "They saw Carmel was helping themselves, so the golf association wanted to help them."

In addition to the most recent donation, Faia said an anonymous donor has given $4,500 to the youth center.

"We've had a lot of community support recently," Faia said. "It's really strong."

Big Sur: Local control or federal domination?

By JIM JOSOFF
President, Friends of the Big Sur Coast

THERE ARE several reasons why the Central California Coastal communities passed resolutions against the Wilson bill to make a federal area of the Big Sur Coast. These resolutions specifically oppose the Wilson bill, but I believe I am correct in saying that they would oppose any legislation that did the same things that passage of S.2159 would do.

First of all, there is the question of local control versus federal domination. Each of the communities on the coast has hammered out Local Coastal Plans with the California Coastal Commission over a number of years, including Big Sur. These plans may not be perfect and may have to be amended from time to time when we and the Coastal Commission see that what sounded good in theory does not work out as well or as protectively as we had hoped. But, flawed or not in minor ways, they will protect our areas.

Now, with the Wilson bill, the senator is saying that the cities and counties along the coast can make wonderful plans in conjunction with the state (and Wilson does say that the Big Sur LCP at least is wonderful), but the federal government cannot quite trust these communities and the state to carry them out. Therefore, Big Brother is going to stand at the shoulder of the communities and cities, and the Monterey County Board of Supervisors to see that no boo-boo is made. That philosophy violates the intent of the separation of powers between state and federal government. Who knows our areas better, the local people who have spent up to 10 years preparing these plans or a federal bureaucrat?

The Wilson bill applies the philosophy of incompetent local government to the County of Monterey in the case of Big Sur. What city, county or community will be next? The establishment of this precedent would be outrageous.

It flies in the face of the president's philosophy that those things which state and local governments can do best should be left to state and local governments, while the federal government does those things which state and local governments cannot do.

•

ONE OF of Mr. Wilson's spokesmen has said that if the federalization of Big Sur were to create any increase in visitation to our area, such an increase would be a modest or moderate one.

We can't take that chance. This is California we are talking about, and even more specifically the central coast of California — Mecca for visitors. We lie between two of the most important tourist attractions in the world, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Closer to home, Big Sur lies between Hearst Castle and the Monterey Peninsula. Three million visitors a year pass through the Big Sur coast, and we are happy to have them visit all the coastal communities as part of their vacation, but there are only so many visitors a year that the environment of the area can take, and that the lifestyles of the residents of the areas can take, without being diminished.

When an area is federalized, the number of visitors can increase three to four or more times. Last year William Penn Mott made a proposal several times to the press that Highway 1 from Morro Bay to Carmel be made a National Parkway. He has since withdrawn that idea, but he compared Big Sur to the Blue Ridge Mountain National Parkway in North Carolina and Virginia. In one sense his comparison was valid since Highway 1 is a long and scenic drive. What he failed to mention was that the Blue Ridge Parkway has 21 million visitors a year and that in the last 10 years visitation has risen by six million. Remember that Big Sur has three million a year, and that figure has remained fairly stable over recent years.

We have to consider — and we wish Wilson had considered — just what brings visitors to our area. Obviously our nearness to San Francisco and Los Angeles has a tremendous impact. Then there is our magnificent weather, our spectacular scenery, and the fact that we have the Pacific at our doorstep; there is the beauty and charm of historic buildings and attractions, and the general laid-back ambience of the central coast communities. We are a restful part of the country. That's why people come to us. When you put all of that together you have Mecca for visitors. That's wonderful. It provides jobs for our people and income for our communities, but it is not without problems.

INCREASED VISITATION means increased pressures for development. It could mean becoming virtually, totally tourist-serving as has happened to communities outside existing federal areas.

It means increased stress on water resources, with which most of the coastal communities already have a problem. It means increased road and sewer maintenance, increased crime prevention, and most of all, increased traffic to cope with. Many of the communities on the California coast are already facing an identity crisis — just how much tourist serving can they do and still maintain the ambience of the communities for resident and tourist alike?

Their traffic at times approaches, and indeed reaches, gridlock. They cannot take additional traffic, at least until they solve their traffic problems, and even then they will only be able to take that which will come naturally without any federal designation and federal promotion of the area.

But protection of the environment is their and our primary concern. Let me quote from The Environmental Protection Hustle by Bernard J. Frieden of MIT when Frieden is discussing the Point Reyes National Seashore. He notes that, "Now that the federal government has bought the land, however, environmentally-concerned residents have discovered that the ecosystems are extremely fragile and will not withstand many visitors." Frieden goes on to quote Gary Giacomini, the county supervisor for the area, as saying, 10 years after that federal area was established:

"Many of them now think it was a mistake to have the federal recreation areas. They're afraid of having four or five million visitors a year. Federal people have proposed some compromise plans so that this won't be like Yosemite, but any plans that will bring in visitors upset West Marin people. Park Service staff say that since federal taxpayers bought the land, they are entitled to come and use it. They also say they wish they had bought out the three or four towns around Point Reyes so there would be no opposition."

Visitation to the park had increased threefold when the supervisor made that statement. It has now reached fourfold.

•

THERE IS another reason to oppose the Wilson bill. It is wrong to penalize the people of Big Sur who have protected the area for generations, for having done so. It is the people of Big Sur who, without any governmental mandate at all, devised a plan for the area in 1959 that became part of the county's Master Plan in 1961.

That was the nation's first master plan designed specifically for scenic values. No one ordered the residents to do that. The Coastal Commission, and now the federal government, are Johnny-come-latelys to Big Sur preservation. The residents have been involved in preservation on a continuous basis for generations. It was the residents who prevented condominiums from being built there, and a county garbage dump, and mega-developments on two of the area's ranches. It is wrong to threaten them with a bureaucratic overlord and with the possibility, indeed the probability, of condemnation of their homes.

The Local Coastal Plan will protect the private lands from overdevelopment. The new Forest Service Management Plan, now about to have public hearings and public input, will protect the Big Sur portion of the Los Padres Forest from overdevelopment. There is no need for Wilson's bill, and it would be harmful to the entire central coast of California.

ONE OF the primary issues that has been raised by Sen. Pete Wilson's bill to make Big Sur a National Scenic Area is whether private property rights could be abrogated by the federal government should the measure pass. Here a cowboy watches over his herd on the El Sur Ranch in Big Sur.

Laperouse landing honored at Mission

IN HONOR of the bicentennial of the Laperouse expedition, at 10 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 20, at the Carmel Mission, Pierre Viaux, new French consul general in San Francisco, will place a wreath by the plaque in honor of Comte Laperouse which is in the front yard of the Mission Basilica.

Viaux will be accompanied by consular officials, a detachment from the French training ship the Balny, and a a group of Anciens Marins.

At 11 a.m. a Thanksgiving Mass will be offered in the Blessed Sacrament Chapel of the Mission in commemoration of the Te Deum Mass offered by Father Lasuen 200 years ago celebrating the "first official visit of a European power to the Spanish establishments of a then-mysterious coast."

The Laperouse expedition was a scientific one and included 15 scientists, according to Isabelle Armitage, president of the Monterey Peninsula French Alliance.

"One, Dr. Rollin, gave a very complete medical report of the Indians at the Mission; Lamanon analyzed the languages of the Indians; Prevost, oncle, sketched the quail, Prevost le jeune, the California trasher," she said. "All contributed to the account sent to Versailles by de Lesseps who left the expedition and took the account to Petrograd, to the French consul."

Laperouse gave a clear picture of the political situation and a complete description of the Spanish Mission, San Carlos. He gave high praise to the Spanish king for maintaining the Mission solely to convert the Indians to Christianity and for setting up presidios to protect the Missions, Armitage added.

He wrote that Lasuen was one of the most estimable men he had met and declared that the Franciscan missionaries at Monterey were good, abstemious, apostolic and kindly to the Indians.

Still, Laperouse, a man of the French Enlightenment, felt that the Mission system was too paternalistic. He was shocked by the restraint imposed and by punishments for infringement of rules (lashes, stocks) which he found beneath the dignity of man, Armitage said.

Grapes and the master

ANSEL ADAMS is known for his magnificent landscapes, but one doesn't normally associate wine grapes and vineyards with the master. They do at The Monterey Vineyard, however.

To celebrate the opening of The Monterey Vineyard Gallery at the winery in Gonzales, the winery threw a lavish party for 350 people that included a spread of food that would make a Roman emperor blush, several wines from the Monterey Vineyard (of course), including their newly-released champagne, entertainment by a string quartet as well as Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers, and a photography collection titled, "Ansel Adams: The Story of a Winery."

The collection, a permanent feature of the new gallery, demonstrates the making of wine, from grapes on the vine to the final product and shows a side of Adams that is not often seen. Many photos feature people of the wineries as well as the product. The Adams' show is accompanied by a show featuring the works of 18 West Coast photographers entitled simply, "Contemporary California Photography."

The party was populated with industry people — a whole contingent from Joseph E. Seagram and Sons, Inc. from New York, (they own the place), including President Sam Bronfman — city officials, media types, photographers and other artists aplenty, Ansel Adams' widow, Virginia Adams, and March Fong Eu, California secretary of state. All appeared duly impressed with the impressive collection.

After a tour of the gallery celebrants were led upstairs where good food, libations and the swinging sounds of Pape Jake and his boys held court, all held amidst stacks of huge oak wine barrels. The ceiling was carpeted with black and white helium balloons and the floor populated with dancers.

What a great place to have a party and a great way to open a gallery.

GETTING THEIR JUST DESSERTS

If chocolate is an aphrodisiac then La Playa Hotel in Carmel would have been the place to be Monday for the love-starved. Actually all you needed was a healthy appetite and a fondness for sweets.

Because of her fondness for sweets Stephany Buswell-Simpson will find herself on the cover of the November issue of Monterey Life. She's the owner of Stephany's Desserts in Santa Cruz and the winner of the first Monterey Life Desserts Contest, which attracted 36 entries from all over the Monterey Bay Area.

MEMBERS OF the Beardsley family (above, in 1968), of Carmel, inspiration for the 1968 movie Yours, Mine and Ours starring Lucille Ball and Henry Fonda recently got together in Los Gatos for the 25th wedding anniversary of Frank Beardsley, now 70, and Helen North Beardsley, now 56 (below), and their 20 children (10 his, eight hers, two theirs), 22 grandchildren and scores of relatives and friends. The clan, longtime Carmel residents who lived on Rio Road, met for their first reunion in 12 years at the home of Rosemary Beardsley Dorn and her husband John. The children in above photo, now ranging in age from 22 to 42 include (top row, left to right): Thom, Rusty, Mary, Mike, Rosemary, Nick, Louise, Susie, and Greg. Middle row: Veronica, Gerry, Jean, Phillip, and Germaine. Sitting: Colleen, Dad, Mom, and Janette. On floor: Joan, Teresa, Joseph, and Helen. Those still living on the peninsula include Thom (Carmel), Greg, Louise, and Joe (Monterey), Susie (Seaside), and Joanie (Pacific Grove). There are plans now for a sequel to the 1968 film tentatively titled Yours, Mine, Ours and Theirs.

Stephany's winning entry — the three judges must have had a tough, if not unenviable, task in picking a winner — was called "Wild Strawberry Seduction." Who says you need chocolate to be sensuous?

Taking second place was Allan Ortiz of the Lodge at Pebble Beach with a charlotte filled with chocolate truffle mousse with Grand Marnier and Amaretto, with third place going to Elena Steele of the Ventana Inn in Big Sur with a dessert she called "Berry Patch," which is described as "a complex layer of white and dark chocolates, wild blackberries and raspberries, ganache, meringue and chocolate grape leaves." They'll get their photos on the inside of the November issue.

Judges included Raymond Bergerac, former owner of the award-winning Maison Bergerac in Pacific Grove; Gary Ibsen of The Monterey Vineyard; and Robert Stewart, executive chef at Hilton Resort of Monterey. A tough job but somebody had to do it.

The person responsible for all this dessert-mania was Sara Seltz, associate editor and promotions director at the magazine.

SHOES MAY BE CLUE TO HEALTH PROBLEMS

When a vertebra is pulled out of position, it can easily interfere with the function of the nerves which brand out from between the vertebrae. The nerves, of course, are the communication lines between the body organs and the brain. Nerve interference can result in an interference with the function of an organ. If this situation goes on uncorrected, another condition can develop. The body produces a signal that warns of the presence of the original trouble, the vertebra being out of place and the resulting difficulties. The warning can show up as something quiet different, such as fatique, sleeplessness or susceptibility to various types of illness.

DR. BEACHAM

You wouldn't want your children's back problems to go on unaided and perhaps turn into something else equally unpleasant or maybe worse.

Here's one test you can use. Look at the heels of your child's shoes. If one is appreciably more worn than the other, especially toward the outside, you are looking at one of the more common indicators of back or posture problems.

The recommended next step is to schedule a chiropractic examination for your child. Your chiropractor, because he is specifically trained for this, can quickly tell you the degree of the problem and what corrective measures should be taken.

BUSINESS BEAT
BY NANCY HILLS

Go for it, Mike

IT'S FUNNY, but every time I hear the The Pine Cone front door open and close, I think I hear Michael Gardner coming in.

It'll be that way for a while, I suppose. But Gardner has gone on to the Enterprise Record, a daily paper in Chico, and he won't be coming through this door for some time.

Since Decembe r 1981, Michael Gardner's byline has become as familar, for some, as the The Pine Cone masthead. And for good reason. Gardner covered the news and people in this paper's territory with an almost superhuman passion. The guy, as we say, has ink in his veins.

Certainly not one to shrink from controversy, his opinions expressed in this paper could set Pine Cone publisher Bill Brown's phone a-ringing with angry protest from those whose names appeared in print. But Michael called them like he saw them, and while I didn't always agree with what he wrote, I never failed to admire his courage.

But he also set the phone ringing with praise and his first-place awards for journalism from organizations such as the California Newpaper Publishers Association lent this paper prestige and dignity.

He kept this area well informed, and won the trust of both his sources and readers as he took them step-by-step through elections, recalls, public meetings, bank failures and every sort of event, big or small, that happened around here.

Though Michael certainly had his share of opportunities to cover the rich and famous on his beats, he never forgot those whose hopes and dreams could be lost in obscurity. He cherished writing about the students in Carmel as much as he enjoyed writing about Carmel's famous mayor.

His writing could be very serious, but he could also be very, very funny. In short, he's good. The most oft voiced words I heard about Michael: "He sure is a good writer."

His shutter-finger sometimes was as busy as his writing fingers, and without his photographs, there would have been a lot of "artistic" white space on these pages.

READY, WILLING and able, new Pine Cone reporter David Leland will be taking over departing associate editor Michael Gardner's beats. Gardner has moved on to a daily paper, the Chico Enterprise-Record after nearly five years working at The Pine Cone. (Nancy Hills photo.)

This red-haired nemesis of backroom deals has meant a lot to me during my time at the paper. I fell into this job straight off the journalistic turnip truck, scared to death. I don't know how many times he "held my hand" while I hyperventilated in confusion and fear.

That's not to say that every day amounted to a mutual admiration society. We certainly had our moments of conflict and despair with each other. It's hard not to when you're working that closely with someone.

There are times, anyone around the paper can tell you, we sounded more like crankly siblings than professional colleagues. Occasionally, I considered sticking his head in the paper cutter. I'm quite sure he contemplated the same fate for me.

Being the delicate flower that I am when I'm angry, everyone from Hearst Castle to the Golden Gate Bridge probably knew when Michael was inciting aggravation.

In other words, he's a dear friend of mine.

I didn't care for competing with him. Michael's reporting abilities would leave me gasping for air as I tried to keep up. But I am grateful that the example I was following was one of such superior dedication.

As one person said to me, "That man'll win a Pulitzer Prize someday." Ain't that the truth. Don't let anyone stop you, either, Michael.

And whether you do or don't win it, there will always be a warm chair and a cold beer waiting for you in my home.

•

MICHAEL MAY be on his way, but his replacement David Leland has arrived to carry on the Pine Cone tradition. Still enthusiastic — we'll cure that — he's ready and eager to take on city council, schools, convoluted library annexes and parking problems. No one around here doubts his ability to do so, and do so well.

Leland, a Santa Cruz resident, has already had a taste of Carmel when he filled in while Michael was on vacation in August.

A recent journalism graduate from San Jose State University, Leland worked as a musician for 15 years prior to his graduation. Music, he said, is a profession that brought him plenty of experience working with people — experience he feels will serve him well in his new job.

Since receiving his degree, Leland explained he has worked as an intern at the Santa Cruz Sentinel and as a freelance writer. His articles have appeared in Monterey Life and Good Times. His first week on the job at the Sentinel, Leland said, garnered him a front-page story — no mean feat for an intern.

Don't worry, he's also got a good sense of humor. I'm sure Carmel and our readers will take to him as quickly as we have at The Pine Cone.

DON'T LET A GERMAN CARMAKER TAKE YOU FOR AN EASY MARK.

With many German cars selling for more than $40,000,* German carmakers are laughing all the way to the Bundesbank.

Make sure the joke isn't on you. Visit your Volvo dealer and take a serious look at the Volvo 740 GLE.

You'll see it costs thousands less than its competitors from Stuttgart and Munich—yet still offers more. With a three-year new-car limited warranty† that puts no limit on mileage. (Mercedes and BMW limit mileage.) A roadside assistance plan that's available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. (Mercedes' plan doesn't offer 24-hour coverage. BMW offers no plan at all!) And a long-standing reputation for building a car that lasts.

So before you pay an exorbitant sum for a German car, consider the Volvo 740 GLE. You'll consider it time —and money—well spent.

Welcome Richard Robins

By DEIDI KRAMER
CUSD Music Boosters

CARMEL HIGH School music director Richard Robins was officially welcomed Sept. 11 by the Carmel Unified School District Music Boosters at a reception in his honor.

Booster members, administrators, and guests heard Robins' enthusiastic report about his first week in the area and his plans for the upcoming school year.

"You don't accomplish anything unless you dream about it first," Robins said.

Some of his dreams for the CHS music program include the use of Sunset Center for the winter concert, "The New Beginning," which will feature tuxedos for all performers.

Robins had the highest praise for the Frohman Academy, which was largely responsible for bringing him to the peninsula, and for the Monterey Jazz Festival organization for their loan of instruments for the students.

The jazz festival also provides for weekly instruction at CHS and the Carmel Middle School with professional musicians.

Robins comes to Carmel from Newhall in Southern California. In addition to teaching instrumental and vocal music, math, science, Robins has been commissioned to compose for the Detroit Ballet Company and is currently in the process of writing for a Christmas television special, The Happy Prince.

Robins summed up his expectations by saying, "It's not the size of the group (that matters), it's the balance. It's how well the music is performed. Fine musicianship...we will achieve it."

Parents and interested communioty members are urged to support the music programs in our schools by joining the CUSD Music Boosters. For more information contact Sharen Carey at 624-3652, or Kathy Nicholson at 624-5636.

CARMEL YOUTH CENTER

BY JEFF BELL

Attack of the 'Rowdy Rooters'

LAST FRIDAY night a Harbor High Pirate was burned at the stake! It's OK, folks, he was only stuffed...with paper.

The burning in effigy was the kickoff for the first cheerleader rally/dance here at the youth center. The high school cheerleaders gave a big "Go Padres!" and the bash was on. The football team was in full attendance. After the beginning ceremonials, everyone bopped back to the snack bar and dance floor.

At the snack bar Chef David Rich and his wife Debbie demonstrated their culinary expertise while spinning outrageous tunes. It's real hard to pass up a burger for a buck these days! We still serve the best hot dog on the planet as well! Last week a lady from Parma came in for one. Anyone who can tell me where Parma is will get a free hot dog on the house!

While in the gym everyone was dancing to the sounds of Matt Arnett and his Video Nova Beam. Matt and sidekick Craig spun some of the hottest video on tape! The very air crackled and sparked while the warp and woof of space was twisted and shaped by those Nova Beam forces! Needless to say those sounds were intergalactic! All in all, it was a real blast.

My thanks to the high school cheerleaders, the football team, the spirit of Nova, Marilyn Stainbrook, Joe and Sharon, Kirsten and Julie, Mr. Willert of HL — and all others for a job well done!

On the horizon at the youth center: karate — classes every Tuesday and Thursday at 7 p.m. with Sensei Karl Quigg. Jazzercize — on Monday and Wednesday with instructor Eileen Rhem. Running class from 4-5:30 with yours truly. Lessons in Ping-Pong humility every day with Dave Rich. We also offer pool, video games, MTV and first-rate movies.

Remember, the "Rowdy Rooters" meet at the youth center every Saturday at 12 noon. See you at the next home game!

Suicide Prevention seeks volunteers

Crisis line volunteers serve an average of four hours per week, six months after training.

Volunteers are also needed to assist with the fund-raising committee and speakers' bureau. For more information or an application, call 375-6966, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. After 4 p.m. and on weekends, call 649-8008 or 424-1425.

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

The publishing biz

AS I stated a few weeks back in this column, the publishing business is rough and now we learn after their first printing that Our Town magazine, a slick publication with a great future, has called it quits. This was the info I received . . . not from the publishers but a reliable source. Hope it isn't true.

BIG WHEELS IN TOWN

Marvin Davis, owner of Pebble Beach Co. and his entourage in town to play his course (Pebble Beach). During their play, the group buzzed through at least four other groups. We understand they also trekked over to Spanish Bay (which won't be open until next year) to try the "playable" nine there. Nice to be rich and powerful, eh?

GALLERY NOTES

Landell Galleries is showing the works of Brian Niebauer and Yin Ling at a special reception for the artists from 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 27. On the same day at the same time, New Masters Gallery has reception for artist Barbara Conley, famous for tranquil paints of ancient wooden and native stone mills with their silent water wheels, weathered valley homesteads and tin roofed barns of yesterday. Catch both showings!

WILL THE REAL NEIL SEDAKA STAND UP?!

This really took place at the Plaza Cafe in the Crossroads. Folks were whispering to one another that a certain patron resembled Neil Sedaka. Johnny Adams of Carmel Highlands, a disc jockey, walked over to the man and said, "Everyone in this restaurant thinks you're Neil Sedaka." To which the stranger replied, "I am, I am Neil Sedaka!" Johnny Adams grinned sheepishly and departed.

COMING A LONG WAY IN A SHORT TIME

Cal Avila of A. L. Williams in Monterey boasting about his company and the fact that the company has gone from $300 million, 85 employees, and seven offices to $65 billion, 150,000 employees and 7,000 offices nationwide. They deal in IRAs, mutual funds, and insurance. Sounds like a "swinging" company and one you should know better. Cal gave me this information as we chatted with Jim Culcasci, owner of Rosine's in Monterey.

EQUAL TIME

John Ables, who has been working with the Little Leaguers in Carmel, tells me he too has put in his bid for the recreation director's post in Carmel. John formerly was in the liquor business and has been associated with tennis and other sports in the area. He likes working with the kids!

GOLF ABROAD, BREEZY

Dick Reynolds, who works for Mike Roseto of Wide World of Golf, just concluded a trip with 24 golfers from this area and Northern California. The trip took them to Scotland and Ireland. Dick Soell, former owner of Jack London's was part of the golf group. He tells me they played Gleneagles and St. Andrews in Scotland. In Ireland they played a course where they experienced the start of Hurricane Charlie; on the ninth green, while Dick was putting a 60-mile-per-hour gale blew him 10 feet away from his putt. The course was located next to Ashford Castle. We sympathize with those golfers who plan a golfing trip abroad only to find old man weather going "bananas" when they arrive at their destination. But who can guarantee the weather?

THE HONEYMOON IS OVER

Local businessmen beginning to complain that it "has slowed down too much." Well, get used to it because it'll never be the way it was during and before the election. The normal trend is to slow down after the Labor Day holiday and to pick up in the spring. Some have invited the slowdown so that they can catch their breath.

I'll catch my breath till next week!

"PINE NEEDLES" GATHERED DURING THE WEEK

The Pine Cone office force was kept quite busy all last week directing visitors to Arts and Crafts Hall, where the art exhibition is still on.

The Admission Day dance at Rancho La Playa, though late in getting started, was an unqualified success, thanks to the efforts of Harrison Godwon.

The Prince Transportation Co., Limited, is in business in Carmel, carrying passengers to and from the high school. Dave Prince is president and chauffeur, and Louise is secretary and collector.

Marshall Englund worked with a shovel last Saturday morning. He found it quite a strenuous job to bury the massive dead sea lion which washed ashore on the beach, near the end of Ninth avenue.

Writing to the mayor of Carmel, a Denver lady says: "I would like to have all the favorable information I can possibly obtain about this wonderful place I have heard about, called 'Carmel by-the-Sea.' "

C.O. Goold is proud of his new stage, and so is Carmel — and well he may be. It has a seating capacity of sixteen, plate glass sides with adjustable window curtains, and was especially built for stage work, which makes it easier riding than most passenger stages. The price was $6,000. "It takes a lot of passengers," said Mr. Goold, "to pay for that." We'll tell the world it does.

SHERIFF ENLISTS CARMEL MEN AS STRIKE GUARDS

About 15 Carmel citizens answered Sheriff Carl Abbott's call to arms Tuesday morning, as violence broke out in the Salinas lettuce strike area. Mobilization of Carmelites began early in the morning, following the American Legion mobilization call. A member of Carmel Legion Post asked the Pine Cone to state that this mobilization was not an official action of the local post.

Shortly before 10 o'clock, a call was received at the police department from Sheriff Abbott, who stated that he had a "young war" on his hands, and asked the Carmel police to assist him in rounding up deputies for service in the strike area.

Officer Roy Fraties was sent by Acting Chief Charles Guth to transport an automobile load of volunteer deputies to Salinas, and at the request of Sheriff Abbott, remained there until late in the afternoon. He reported "no excitement" and that the crowd was orderly during the hours that he served under Sheriff Abbott.

A gas gun and several boxes of tear gas shells, purchased by Carmel for the police department two years ago, were furnished to the sheriff's office at his request for arms and ammunition.

SEWER CONNECTIONS AT NEW JUNIOR HI MAY COST $90,000

Last night the school board was placed in a financial quandary, a potential severe blow to the pocketbook in the amount of a possible $90,000 if the district decides to plan for a major trunk sewer line with the Carmel Sanitary District to service the new junior high school site at the mouth of Carmel Valley.

Presenting a progress report on a sewage study being conducted for the district by the Kennedy Engineering firm, engineer Bruce Collins told trustees of two alternative plans for the line, one calling for the addition of a pumping station and costing $257,000, and another utilizing an existing pumping station and costing $171,000.

ANTI-TOURIST SLOGANS APPEAR

Carmel was hit by a rash of anti-tourist slogan painting last week after Tuesday's tumultuous city council meeting.

Four cars and a tour bus were painted with spray paint, as well as the statue of Father Serra at Camino del Monte and Serra Avenue. Another car, outside the city limits, was also reported to have been painted.

The painted messages, accompanied by a swastika, are believed to be the work of a young person, according to police chief Bill Ellis, possibly the same person responsible for the same type of incident last year.

"Tourists go home," was painted on the statue and "Tourist Pigs," was found on four cars as well as a tour bus.

TITLE CO. GOOF COSTS $75,000

When the city of Carmel purchased two 4,000-square-foot lots near Dolores and Fifth last year for $260,000, it got more than it bargained for.

Like two water mains, which crossed the property and which did not show up on property descriptions provided the city before purchase.

The city bought the property with the intention of someday constructing senior citizen housing, but the existence of the two water mains presented a costly obstacle.

Sell-out signs at the Monterey Jazz Festival needn't keep you away

By MICHAEL GARDNER

DOES "sold out" give you the blues?

Well, let me jazz you up with some good vibes.

The 29th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival, running Friday through Sunday, Sept. 19-21, may be officially classified as a sell-out. But there are still ways for those who haven't reserved their tickets to see and hear the big names at this year's event.

For years the jazz festival has sold out and the only way to get in was to have connections in high places, or hang out in front of the Monterey Fairgrounds where the event is staged in hopes of buying a scalper's ticket.

But festival organizers have since added a "grounds admission" ticket that provides the chance to observe main stage acts performing on the smaller Garden Stage or in the Night Club.

The grounds admission ticket costs $15 per day and is available at the gate.

MARK NAFTALIN took a turn at the keyboards at last year's Monterey Jazz Festival. (Holly McFarland photo).

Some of the name stars performing on the Garden Stage or in the Night Club include: the Bruce Forman Quartet, the Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazztet with Curtis Fuller, Linda Hopkins, Richie Cole, the Mundell Lowe Quartet and the Monterey Peninsula's own Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers.

Of course, the best day to go on the grounds is Saturday, where you'll have a blues party from noon to 8 p.m., then stroll over to hear some mellow jazz playing in the Night Club until midnight.

Last year the Mark Naftalin Rhythm and Blues Revue actually drew crowds out of the main arena blues show on Saturday afternoon, filling the Garden Stage lawn with the sounds of Sonny Rhodes, Johnny Heartsman, Mississippi Johnny Waters and Charlie Musselwhite.

Those names will be back this Saturday, beginning at noon.

For the jazz fan, the Sunday grounds admission ticket is the best bet with names like Bruce Forman Quartet, Time Five and Richie Cole appearing on the Garden Stage. That night, still for the same admission price, you can go over to the Night Club and hear The Keio Light Music Society Jazz Band, Paul Contos' Urbano, Bosco Petrovic, and others.

•

OF COURSE, the grounds admission ticket does not permit entrance to the main arena with such jazz stars as the Bruce Forman Quartet, Richie Cole, Mundell Lowe, Bobby McFerrin, Tito Puente and the Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazz Quartet.

And that's not even counting the lineup at the "party" — the Saturday afternoon blues show, this year featuring John Lee Hooker, Etta James, Joe Liggins and the Honeydrippers and Linda Hopkins.

But how does one get in to a sold-out performance?

The secret is the illegal, yet common method of dealing with scalpers.

In front of the fairgrounds on Friday afternoons there's almost always someone selling tickets at cost because they could not attend all shows. (Season ticket holders must buy a series, all five shows. No tickets are sold on a one-show only basis)

So if you can locate one of them, great. If not, go to the north side of the fairgrounds to the main entrance. You don't have to look, the scalpers will find you.

GETTING DOWN to some serious keyboarding is Dave Brubeck, captured at the 1985 Monterey Jazz Festival. (Photograph by Holly McFarland).

If you do decide to go this route — and remember it's against the law — here's some advice:

When dealing with a scalper, always bargain. He'll ask $30, you offer $20. If the show's already started, don't budge because you know he has to dump the ticket.

This year, with no big headliner like Sarah Vaughn, don't pay more than $25 for a ticket.

•

RTS & LEISURE

And, another last bit of advice is get there early, especially to park your vehicle. The best spot is on lighted Fremont Street. Try to carpool, or have someone drop you off and pick you up. Don't ignore "no parking" signs on private property — the rules are strictly enforced.

Friday, Sept. 19, 8:30 p.m.

1986 All Star Band, Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazztet, Rare Silk, Joe Kennedy with Claude Williams and the Bob Florence Band.

Saturday, Sept. 20, 1:30 p.m.

Joe Liggens and the Honeydrippers, Linda Hopkins, John Lee Hooker and Etta James.

Saturday, Sept. 20, 8:15 p.m.

Bruce Forman Quartet with guests Jackie Coon, Bosco Petrovic and Eiji Kitamura; Bobby McFerrin, The Monterey Jazz Festival All Stars with Mundell Lowe, Hank Jones, Monty Budwig, Vince Lateano, Clark Terry, Red Holloway, Jiggs Whigham; and the Capp-Pierce Juggernaut Big Band.

Sunday, Sept. 21, 12:30 p.m.

Winners of the 1986 Jazz Competition: The Berkeley High School Combo and Berkeley High School Jazz Band; the California All-Star Band with Bill Berry, Clark Terry and others; Keio Light Music Society Jazz Band; and Time Five.

Sunday, Sept. 21, 7:15 p.m.

Richie Cole's Alto Madness with guests Frank Morgan and Charles McPherson; Dianne Reeves; Mundell Lowe Quartet and Tito Puente's Latin Jazz All Stars.

Of course, you don't have to be in the main stage arena to hear some great sounds. For the $15 per day grounds admission ticket you will find some of those main stage artists jammin' in the Night Club or out on the Garden Stage.

On Friday, a variety of artists will play on the Garden Stage from 6 to 8 p.m. and in the Night Club from 8 p.m. to midnight.

The lineup includes: The Bruce Forman Quartet, the Chris James Quartet, Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazztet, and the Monterey Jazz Festival All-Stars.

OF COURSE, Saturday afternoon is reserved for the blues.

Appearing on the Garden Stage from noon to 8 p.m. is Mark Naftalin and His Blues Show featuring such great artists as Mississippi Johnny Waters, Charlie Musselwhite, Sonny Rhodes, Etta James and, one of the best, John Lee Hooker.

After rocking out in the afternoon, mellow out Saturday to the sounds of the Monterey Jazz Festival All-Stars, Richie Cole, Bruce Forman Quartet and Linda Hopkins in the Night Club from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Closing day, Sunday, Sept. 21, the Garden Stage will feature from 11 a.m. to midnight the sounds of the Bruce Forman Quartet, the North Monterey County High School Jazz Band, Time Five, Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers, Richie Cole with Diana Reeves, Mundell Lowe Quartet, and an "International Jam" with Eiji Kitamura, Bosco Petrovic and Jiggs Whigham.

Move over to the Night Club to close it out, featuring from 8 p.m. to midnight, the Paul Contos Group, Bosco Petrovic, Bruce Forman Quartet, Jan Deneau Quartet, Jake Stock and the Abalone Stompers, and the Keio University jazz band.

For more information, call the Monterey Jazz Festival, 373-3366.

Castroville's own 'think thistles' during annual fair

AN EDIBLE thistle first cultivated in Italy in the middle of the 15th century will be honored 1980s-style during the 27th annual Artichoke Festival in Castroville — "Artichoke Center of the World."

A 10-K race, parade, arts and crafts fair, flea market and firehouse breakfast are but some of the activities scheduled to coincide with this celebration of the venerable thistle.

All commercially grown artichokes come from approximately 10,000 acres of California's fertile coastal counties. In Castroville there are four fresh pack plants and a marinating plant in operation all year round.

The annual Artichoke Festival is traditionally a three-day affair, beginning on Friday night with a dinner and the selection and crowning of the new Artichoke Queen. The coronation evening this year will begin with no-host cocktails served 6 to 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 19, at the Castroville Community Center. Dinner will be served at 7:30 p.m., with dancing to the Mike Marotta Jr. Band to follow at 8:15. The coronation will take place at 9:30 p.m.

From 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 20, Castroville will turn over its streets to festival goings-on. At this time the public can indulge in artichoke delicacies, face painting, antique fire truck display, artichoke throw, the arts and crafts fair and continuous music and entertainment.

The annual Castroville Artichoke Festival 10K Run is scheduled in conjunction with the 27th festival on Saturday, Sept. 20. The race is run over level, paved streets and dirt ranch roads. There are no hills on the course, just artichokes.

Race-day registration is planned 7:30 to 8:45 a.m. near the Castroville Community Center. Race fee is $7. T-shirts will be available to runners for $3.

Awards will be presented immediately following the run at the finish line. Prizes include trophies for the first man, woman and youth finishers, and artichokes for the first and second in each division.

The race will begin at 9 a.m. sharp. Again this year, there will be a Kids' Fun Run preceding the 10 K. Open to all kids under 12, the approximately three-quarter-mile run is on paved streets — no hills and no artichokes.

There is a 50 cent entry fee for the Kids' Fun Run and every finisher will receive a ribbon. In addition, kids' T-shirts will be available to fun runners. Race registratoin and course supervision will be provided by parents from Elkhorn Elementary School. Registration will begin at 7:30 a.m. and the Fun Run starts at 8:30 near the Castroville Community Center.

For race information, call 633-2726 or 663-5294.

•

SUNDAY EVENTS for the 27th Castroville Artichoke Festival will begin with the firehouse breakfast from 6 to 9 a.m. The North Monterey County Firefighters will serve their traditional breakfast in the fire station adjacent to the community center.

After breakfast, it's a short walk to Merritt Street where "one of the best little parades in California" will begin at 10 a.m.

Continuous entertainment on two stages, arts and crafts booths, carnival games and food booths featuring artichoke specialties will be open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday. New this year will be hot air balloon rides for a bird's-eye view of the fun and entertainment.

CLASSICAL PIANIST Steve Warzycki, a graduate of the San Francisco Conservatory of Music who currently makes his home in London, will perform in concert Sunday, Sept. 21 at the Monterey Peninsula College Music Hall. (Malcolm Crowthers photo).

Classical pianist performs at MPC

Monterey Peninsula College will present a concert-recital with classical pianist Steve Warzycki, a former resident of Salinas, at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 21, in the MPC Music Hall.

Warzycki will perform works by Bach, Mozart, Chopin, Bartok and Liszt.

A graduate of North Salinas High School and the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, Warzycki made a critically acclaimed debut with the San Francisco Symphony in 1977. He went on to London to study with Peter Feuchtwanger and Ruth Nye.

He was one of four young American pianists chosen by the U.S. Information Agency to represent this country in 1984 on tours of foreign countries. His tour took him to Brazil, Paraguay, Uruguay, Peru and Chile, in all of which he gave solo recitals and conducted master classes. He was named "Best Foreign Pianist of the Year" in Uruguay.

Warzycki has also played with the Oakland Symphony and has given recitals in Hong Kong, Japan and Great Britain.

Tickets for the concert are $5, $3 for students and seniors. Tickets are available through the MPC Community Services Office, 646-4051.

Volunteer help in critical demand

Are you supportive to those in trouble, do you have skills the community needs? Let Volunteers In Action (VIA) match your supportive talent and skills with fulfilling volunteer opportunities. VIA has more than 200 listed positions from which to choose. Here are six needed immediately.

•A crisis line volunteer who can be supportive and informative to victims of rape and other crimes. The volunteer is needed to work one 12-hour shift a week, be available to meet with victims and accompany them to the hospital, if necessary. Characteristics needed for this position include a desire to help others. Training begins Sept. 22.

•A child care worker is needed to assist in supervising "at risk" children in a therapeutic environment. The volunteer will work with children individually and in groups, supervise children's play, help prepare meals and observe and record children's behavior. Charactristics VIA is looking for include a sensitivity to emotionally stressed children and the ability to communicate in a safe and supportive manner.

•A salesperson for a gift shop is needed who likes selling merchandise, can make change and likes meeting people. Donated items must be unpacked and priced and the volunteer does this task as well as sells. A willingness to work and get along with people are desired traits in the volunteer.

•A receptionist for a volunteer group is needed — one who will be willing to serve as a liaison between the public and the office, to answer the telephone and greet visitors, take messages and assist the staff with clerical duties. A pleasant telephone manner, warm personality, and general clerical skills are the qualifications.

•The American Red Cross is seeking volunteer disaster action team members to assist victims of disasters. Disaster volunteers need to be available nights, weekends, and holidays.

•A grant writer is urgently needed for a non-profit group. The volunteer would research information required for grants and prepare the grant request. An ability to work independently and to research quietly and thoroughly is needed in the volunteer.

To volunteer for these or other positions call Volunteer In Action or visit Suite A-24, 444 Pearl St., Monterey.

Winter "flu" season is almost here, and the Monterey County Health Department will conduct its annual immunization drive Sept. 30 through Oct. 17, in an effort to vaccinate 7,000 high-risk individuals.

Persons at high risk include those over 55, adults and children with certain heart, lung or other chronic health conditions, and health professionals employed in nursing homes and convalescent hospitals.

Such individuals are urged to visit their own physician for influenza immunization, or get the immunization at one of the health department clinics.

A series of senior citizen influenza immunization clinics is scheduled on the Monterey Peninsula and in the Salinas Valley. Charge is $2 per person. The Monterey Peninsula clinic schedule is as follows:

Monterey, Monterey Youth Center, 777 Pearl St., 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 2; New Monterey Neighborhood Center, 280 Dickman, 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 2.

Pacific Grove, community center, 515 Junipero Ave., 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 7.

Carmel, Carmel Foundation, Lincoln and Eighth, 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 10.

Seaside, Oldemeyer Multi-Use Center, 986 Hilby, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 16; Monterey County Health Department, 1292 Olympia Ave., 8 to 10:30 a.m. Thursdays, Oct. 2, 9 and 16.

Marina, Marina Grange Hall, 213 Carmel Ave., 1:30 to 3 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 16.

For more information, call 899-4271 or 646-4636.

WILD BURROS and horses will be up for adoption this weekend at the Salinas Rodeo Grounds. The U.S. Bureau of Land Management sponsors the adoption, where animals will be made available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Wild horses and burros available for adoption Saturday and Sunday

Wild horses whose ancestors may have been brought to California by the Spanish Conquistadors and wild burros, whose lineage can be traced to the Gold Rush era, will be made available for adoption Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 20 and 21, in Salinas by the U. S. Bureau of Land Management.

The animals are being trucked to the Salinas Rodeo Grounds for adoption by concerned citizens. Adoptions will begin at 8 a.m. on both days on a first-come, first-served basis.

Horses available for private care will be mares, fillies, colts, and geldings in a variety of colors. Some mares may be pregnant or have foals at their sides. The burros include only jacks and some geldings. Animals range from yearlings through 8 years of age.

The BLM charges an adoption fee of $125 per horse and $75 per burro. Mares with foals at their side are also $125. The payment must be made by cash, certified check, or money order (no personal checks). This fee is to offset the capture and holding fees, as well as necessary veterinary costs. All animals have been blood tested, vaccinated and wormed.

Under regulations governing the wild horse adoption program, potential adopters are required to provide a corral or enclosure made of planks, poles, or pipe materials that is at least six feet high for horses, five feet for burros, until they are gentled. No barbed wire is permitted.

Adoptors also must have the financial means to support the animal; transportation (ideally a four-horse stock trailer, or a covered two-horse trailer, no drop ramp tailgates); and a 20-foot, ½-inch-thick lead rope and nylon web halter. It is recommended that individuals seeking to adopt the wild animals have knowledge on training and raising horses, or at least have a knowledgeable individual available to assist them.

With patience and tender, loving care, the horses can be trained for riding, roping, showing, or kept as pets. They make excellent endurance horses. The burros gentle down very quickly and in addition to making outstanding pets, are excellent weed eaters.

Applications for adopting the animals can be obtained by calling any of the following numbers: BLM Sacramento (916) 978-4725 or BLM Susanville (916) 257-5381. Applications also will be available at the adoption site Sept. 20 and 21 from BLM personnel who will screen applicants. Title to each adopted animal can be obtained after one year of caring for the animal.

Additional information on the adoption program is available by calling Connie Kingston in Sacramento, (916) 978-4725.

Public visitors are welcome.

THEATER REVIEW
BY JEAN THURMAN

'Robin Hood: The King Returns'

ROBIN HOOD returns to the Forest Theater in Carmel in GroveMont's production of Robin Hood: The King Returns. This is yet another world premiere for playwright Dan Gotch, who also brought us Zorro this summer and Robin Hood: A New Adventure last year. Gotch has been known for years for his Irish literature presentations and has recently branched out into the action/adventure format.

As the play opens, all is not well in Merrie Olde England. Prince John is striving to assassinate King Richard the Lion-Hearted and usurp his throne, much to the chagrin of the people of England. Eleanor, the Queen Mother, enlists the aid of the unlikely duo of Robin Hood and the Sheriff of Nottingham to safely escort Richard back to his throne.

Although the play is a straightforward action play with good vs. bad sharply divided, there is an exploration of the range of both good and evil. The villains run the gamut from the weak Prince John through the dashing Baron Reneau, and the heroes range from the introspective Sheriff of Nottingham to the swashbuckling Robin Hood.

Prince John is despised by all, not so much because he is wicked, but because he is weak and cowardly. He has a legitimate point that he is in truth the ruler of the country, and if he had Richard's image rather than his own he probably would succeed in a bloodless coup. Richard is not so much a good king as a brave and dashing fighter always running off to fight some war.

Both Thomas Sanchez, as Prince John, and David Miller, as King Richard, aptly show the obvious qualities of their respective characters, then surprise us with character reversals. Prince John has his burst of courage and King Richard his moments of fear, and both characters are better for this treatment.

The most satisfying conflict is between the Sheriff of Nottingham, a good guy in this version of the story, and Robin Hood. Ron Cohen as the Sheriff brings introspective qualities to the role. The Sheriff is in an ethically difficult position. As a loyal subject and employee of King Richard, how can he refuse to honor the King's appointed representative, Prince John?

Robin Hood, in contrast, seems to have taken the easy way out, by acting outside the law rather than within it. Stephen Moorer plays Robin Hood with a Peter Pan like quality — a great deal of grace and spirit, a natural leadership ability, and little thought behind his actions. Another major conflict in the play is a lopsided battle between the exceedingly regal Eleanor of Aquitaine and Prince John who doesn't stand a chance. Florence Larsen has some of the best lines in the play and plays them all to their best advantage. She manages to fuse dignity and comedy with no loss to either characteristic.

Mark Shuler plays the role of the Baron Reneau as well as choreographing the multitude of fight scenes. His Reneau is a villain one has to respect both for his fighting style and abilities. Tiffany Grant does a fine job as the pretty and spunky heroine Maid Marion, a role that seems to be obligatory for this kind of show.

Jarod Hoelscher makes a hero of the minor role of Robert and James P. Kinney adds a comic touch as Friar Tuck. The only weak character is a minor one — Will Scarlet. This is more the fault of the playwright than the actor. The character needs more variety. One soon tires of his constant demands for a fight.

Director Jim Webber has, with co-director Dan Gotch, presented a creditable performance of a classic story. It has all the excitement, humor and suspense a show like this requires, rapidly paced with smooth scene changes. The fight scenes are frighteningly realistic and are improved 100 % over similar scenes in last year's production.

The play is preceded by a Faire and interrupted by an entertainment at intermission. These proceedings and the general character of the show invite audience participation. Unfortunately, some members of the opening night audience didn't know the difference between participation and disruption. It is fine to cheer the heroes and hiss the villans but an audience must let the players present the play, especially when the play is as enjoyable as this one.

Assorted media comprise new P.G. Art Center show

COLLECTIONS of paintings, drawings, mono prints and photographs comprise the new exhibit opening Friday, Sept. 19 at the Pacific Grove Art Center.

In the Hall Gallery, viewers will see mono prints by Mimi La Plant. A native of San Francisco, La Plant "drew a lot during grammar school" and completed her first oil painting at age 10. She began formal art training in 1970 at Santa Rosa Junior College, and went from there to Sonoma State University where she studied etching.

La Plant entered the University of California at Berkeley in 1973, where she received her bachelor's degree with emphasis in etching. The artist entered Humboldt State in 1980, began doing monotypes in 1981 and gained her master of arts degree in 1982.

According to La Plant, "With color, I can create a universe that is expressive and unlimited, a world of emotive and dramatic power." Her interest lies in "intuitive and spontaneous images ... I am concerned with the concept of a powerful force outside the ego-consciousness and that it can be manifested in art."

La Plant has taught art around the state and her work is in collections throughout the west.

Will Wallace, whose "Stolen Moments" can be viewed in the Photo Gallery, was raised in the Midwest. He has spent 25 years in California, active as a painter, maker of stained-glass windows, and for the past 10 years, as a photographer.

He is a contributing photographer to Monterey Life, and his works have also been published in Black Arts International and Jazz Times. In addition to exhibiting in the Postal Employees' National Show in Washington, D.C., Wallace contributes to the Seaside Art and Jazz Annual Show and the Monterey County Fair.

For his "Stolen Moments" exhibit, Wallace has chosen works that capture the intimate human gestures of people celebrating what they love. Works in black and white as well as color depict a jazz pianist, a father and daughter in repose, a woman reading a letter.

JAZZ GREATS and others are captured in Stolen Moments, a collection of photographs by Will Wallace that is featured at the Pacific Grove Art Center, 568 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove.

Rob Gischer, a Washington state artist, explained that in his work he strives for "a harmony between chaos and order." He received his B.A. and M.E.D. art education degrees from Western Washington University in Bellingham.

"I do little preparation before beginning a new piece of work. I work with photo images I have taken along with natural objects," Gischer explained. "I sketch, arrange objects and photos on the background surface until a chemistry occurs.

"One image with the aura that it emits, when played against another image or object, creates an alternate unseen feeling. It is this unseen third presence that interests me."

Gischer's drawings and paintings can be viewed in the Elmarie Dyke Gallery.

The Pacific Grove Art Center is open noon to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. This exhibition continues through Oct. 25. For more information, call 375-2208.

Cartoonist demonstrates techniques

Cartooning will be the subject of a demonstration and talk at the first fall meeting of the Monterey Peninsula chapter of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees on Monday, Sept. 22, at the New Monterey Neighborhood Center, Lighthouse and Dickman.

The artist, Dorris Quinn, will also present an exhibit of her science fiction and fantasy paintings, as well as her cartoons, called "Quinkatoons."

The potluck luncheon is at noon, followed by the informal demonstration of the art of creating cartoons for fun or profit. Getting ideas, various tools and techniques, gag writing and marketing tips will be touched upon. Questions will be welcomed.

For information about the National Association of Retired Federal Employees monthly meetings or membership in the association, call the membership chairman at 384-8722, evenings.

Mary Ellen Mark to lead photo tour of India for The Friends

THE FRIENDS of Photography's 1987 workshop program will open with a 23-day course taught by Mary Ellen Mark in India, Nepal, Kashmir and Thailand. Mark has worked as a freelance photographer for nearly two decades and has photographed extensively in India.

Mark has received numerous awards from both the artistic and photojournalistic communities. Her photographs have broken barriers, serving as documents and as fine artistic compositions. She has traveled to India both on assignment for Life and for her own projects, producing several groups of work and two books of photographs — Falkland Road: Prostitutes of Bombay, published by Knopf in 1981, and Photographs of Mother Teresa's Missions of Charity in Calcutta, published by The Friends of Photography in 1985 as Untitled 39.

The workshop, beginning on April 15 and ending on May 5, 1987, will provide participants with the opportunity to photograph in Bangkok, the culturally rich capital of Thailand; in Kathmandu, Nepal, famous for its ancient art and architecture; in several Indian cities and in Hong Kong.

The itinerary includes numerous sites of exotic architecture, not only the more frequently photographed structures such as the Taj Mahal, but also structures like the 15th-century Jain Temple built with 200 pillars, all of which are different, and the Temple of the Sun God, with its erotic sculpture (both in Ranakpur).

For further information or the itinerary, send a postcard to Julia Nelson-Cal, workshop coordinator, The Friends of Photography, P. O. Box 500, Carmel, CA 93921 or call 624-6330.

Artist reveals a sensitive eye for portraiture

By TEDDY WOJNICKI

'THE MOST important thing is finding one's place on the earth,'' says Pacific Grove artist Richard Sawicki, a slight, meek man with a Dostoyevsky-like beard, who laughs a voiceless laughter.

Sawicki is a recent transplant from tank-silenced Poland.

How did he choose to become an immigrant? He says he did not. He was BORN one. Both his parents were refugees. They had lived in Buczacz, Ukraine. Typically, they considered the Ukraine their home. However, as the result of the Hitler-Stalin pact, the Soviets took over Buczacz Sept. 17, 1939. The Sawickis' crops, homes, as well as hopes had been destroyed by the Red Army and they were handed the key to the street. As the war ended, they found themselves, without a penny to their name, in Breslau, now Wroclaw, in Poland, where Richard first saw the light of day.

Sawicki's story makes me think about a cartoon I saw in The New Yorker the other day: A cage. There is no bird in the cage, however. Instead, on the bottom of the cage there is an egg.

Today, the cage is far away and long ago. Here and now is Pacific Grove.

Sawicki lives in an apartment building hidden in pine trees that murmur quietly, soaking in the rain. The tang of seaweed and fireplace smoke hang in the air. The driveway is littered with pine needles. A forest hideaway, almost. Right on the staircase you may find a pine cone gnawed by a squirrel.

Entering Sawicki's apartment you may seem to find yourself at the wrong place: the apartment looks rather like a museum than a Pacific Grove apartment. It smells funny: the oil paint is drying. Paintings in all stages, charcoals and pastels all over—they crowd each corner and climb the walls.

The apartment reflects a Spartan lifestyle. The only ''luxury'' item is a tapestry made in India Sawicki brought home from his round-the-world trip. Whoever lives in this apartment, you feel, believes in simple living, but high thinking.

•

IN A FLASH, Sawicki serves tea. ''Massala tea,'' he points out. ''Ginger, cardamom, cinnamon, cloves and black pepper.''

POLISH-BORN ARTIST Richard Sawicki, a veteran of around-the-world-travels, today concentrates on portrait painting in his Monterey Peninsula home.

Tastes good. But it does not merely taste. It smells, it bites, it puts your thoughts on the run. ''Heady,'' I compliment him.

''Without feeling good about the place on the earth you step on,'' Sawicki ruminates, pointing out on his globe the countries the spices originated from, ''one cannot be real happy.''

Sawicki's quest for a place on the earth of his own had brought him to quite a few spice-producing countries, known also for being tourists' paradises.

Did he find it? It would be interesting to find out, I thought.

''You've traveled around the globe and trodden many countries,'' I said. ''Did you find one place on the earth that felt good to step on?''

There was no hesitation. ''Yes.''

''Where was it?''

''Here,'' Sawicki said. ''Anywhere I went I felt I was just a traveler. In California, however, for the first time in my whole life, I felt good about the ground I was stepping on.''

Sawicki slaves over his canvases for several hours a day, 10 to 15 hours on weekends, painting faces live or from a good photograph.

''How long does it take to finish a portrait?'' I ask.

''To my satisfaction,'' Sawicki says, ''about four months.''

Most of his faces, their flesh penetrated by light, are thrown against a dark, sometimes black, background. The murkiness of his paintings, including his landscapes, clearly indicates an intense, brooding, Dostoyevsky-type Slavic soul.

Sawicki strives to paint the reality ''inside out.'' That is why he concentrates on portraits. He is a keen psychologist—a portrait painter has to be. But his portraits are very realistic. He paints lines, wrinkles, sores, all.

''You seem to be religiously faithful to minute detail,'' I observe. ''Why not, instead of painting, take a picture? Photography is even more accurate.''

''Nature is not artistically perfect,'' Sawicki says. ''The painter's tools help to eliminate unnecessary parts.''

''There's a whole new trend in modern art called 'hyper-realism,' '' I interject.

Sawicki nods, pointing to one of his portraits of an old, bitter woman. Deep lines, wrinkles, warts, and dark shadows around her eyes are painstakingly recorded, but the warmth of unrelenting hope of the woman beautifully shows through.

''An in-depth look, where it used to be just a form,'' explains Sawicki. ''For too long art was concentrated on the form alone, not the inside. The 'hyper-realism' is undoing the damage.''

Working stubbornly, Sawicki is heading for a career as a portrait artist. Little by little, he is gaining wide recognition. Their judgment based on the quality of his works, the editors of the Directory of American Portrait Artists which was published last year, invited Sawicki to include his entry.

As for the painting techniques, the light in its interplay with the shadow are central in Sawicki's art. He seeks to paint the light-penetrated hair or clothes. However, his quest does not end there—he strives to show the light as it penetrates the flesh itself. Georges de la Tour was the master of that technique, exemplified best in his famous Education of the Virgin. An excellent example of this technique among Sawicki's works is the portrait of a sultry Oriental beauty under her sunshade. The model is not merely ablaze with sun—she apparently has a big chunk of sun within.

Looking at the new, sunny canvas I cannot help thinking about the painters who, in Sawicki's own words, had found ''one's place on the earth,'' as Van Gogh had Provence and Gauguin Tahiti. In their case, finding ''one's place on the earth'' resulted in a dramatic shift in their palette.

As I look at the portrait of the Oriental beauty, I realize that that is exactly what is happening to Richard Sawicki now.

Jazz sculpture sale to benefit youth music fund

THE REID Gallery of Carmel will donate proceeds from the auction of Paul Wegner's One More Time sculpture to the Monterey Jazz Festival Youth Fund. The sculpture will be exhibited this weekend at the Monterey Jazz Festival, and bids will be accepted there and at Reid Gallery.

REID GALLERY of The Barnyard, Carmel, will conduct a silent auction of Paul Wegner sculpture to benefit the Monterey Jazz Festival Jazz Education Fund.

Entitled "One More Time," the piece depicts a jazz quartet in the heat of performance. It is up for silent auction, beginning at the festival. All proceeds of the auction will be donated to the festival's Jazz Education Fund. The work will be on display at the festival at the Reid Gallery's booth, during which time silent bids will be taken. The bids will be opened and the sculpture presented to the highest bidder at a ceremony to be held at the Reid Gallery on Saturday, Sept. 27. A minimum bid has been set by Reid.

"Both Paul and myself are lovers of music. I am proud and honored to have the opportunity along with Paul's publisher, Fine Art Aquisitions, to support the Monterey Jazz Festival's Jazz Education Fund with this donation," Reid said.

"I hope that our presence with the 'Touch of Jazz' collection at the festival will serve as an inspiration for both lovers of jazz and art alike."

Sculptor Paul Wegner's Compositions in Bronze series portrays the heroes and dreams of American life in addition to the spirit of American music in free-floating sculptural images. Each piece is cast using the lost wax process. To honor Wegner's musically inspired collection, the Dyansen Gallery of SoHo hosted a jazz salute in 1985 at which vibraphonist and band leader Lionel Hampton performed. The concert was recorded and broadcast by 150 radio stations nationwide.

Wegner has also been commissioned by the National Geographic Society, the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, the U.S. Department of the Interior and the Mount Vernon Museum, for which he created two life-size sculptures of George and Martha Washington. In addition to his many commissions, Wegner has exhibited his work in galleries throughout the world, with permanent displays in many museums.

The Reid Gallery is noted for its eclectic collection of innovative and classic art works. Featuring the works of such prominent artists as Erte, Yamagata, Charie Reid, Melanie Taylor Kent, Paul Wegner, Tom Fulweider, Doug Webb and others, the Reid Gallery handles original works, limited edition prints and bronzes as well as one-of-a-kind jewelry creations, known as "art wear."

The Monterey Jazz Festival's Jazz Education Fund is a comprehensive curriculum of jazz education for the high schools, junior high schools and junior colleges of Monterey County. It has provided instruments, sheet music and professional musicians as Travelling Teachers to the tune of more than $400,000 since September of 1983.

Artisans gather in San Juan

ONE OF the largest street art shows in California is coming up Sunday, Sept. 21. It's the 10th Annual Arts and Crafts Fair in San Juan Bautista where some 300 artists and artisans will gather in the streets and transform the historic mission village into a vast open-air gallery.

"Honored Artist" this year is Jack White, official artist for the State of Texas, whose patrons and portraits read like a "Who's Who" in the worlds of sports, politics, business and entertainment. Jack White will be "street-side" for the whole day — 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. — with examples of his human and wild-life studies.

Professional painters, jewelers, potters, weavers, sculptors and glass-crafters will show and sell their one-of-a-kind wares and the undiscovered artisans, too, will offer a myriad of "country crafts" — from dolls and baskets to wooden toys and dough-art Christmas ornaments.

Entertainment adds to the festive atmosphere: strolling musicians and capering clowns mingle with the crowds while Greely, the 15-piece one-man-band fascinates the onlookers and Sharon and Sean fill the air with wail of bagpipe, ripple of harp and pulse of primitive drum.

Food abounds, too. Community groups offer their specialties from street stalls; the Service Club maintains an all-day wine and cheese garden and the town's dozen restaurants cater to every taste.

The famed Old Mission, the State Historic Park and the many antique and specialty shops and galleries will be open for the day. There's plenty of parking. Admission is free.

San Juan Bautista is located just off Route 101, 90 miles south of San Francisco, 35 miles from Carmel/Monterey, a few minutes from Gilroy and Salinas.

Otsuka originals, graphics shown

HISASHI OTSUKA will attend a Carmel reception celebrating his newest designs on Saturday, Sept. 20 at Hanson Galleries. Hours are 7 to 9 p.m. at the galleries on Ocean Avenue near San Carlos Street.

The Hanson show will feature both original paintings by Otsuka as well as collotypes and limited edition graphics.

Born and raised in Tokyo, Otsuka was apprenticed to Tateo Jo, one of 11 honorary members of The Design Association of Japan. Otsuka's father was at first against the apprenticeship. The family was poor and needed the son's help in the garment business. But Otsuka ultimately apprenticed for 12 years under the kimono designer, making the "Bushido" code of discipline, dedication and duty the basis for his life and art.

Otsuka uses acrylic in addition to kimono dye, applying color by squeezing it out of small plastic cones that look like pastry tubes. The applicators enable Otsuka to paint with a fine line.

Cannery Row Guide

Cannery Row — the street immortalized in John Steinbeck's novel and by a little silver fish — is one of the highlights of a visit to the Monterey Peninsula.

The mile-long Row curves along the shores of Monterey Bay from the Coast Guard Station to the former site of the Hovden Cannery, now home to the state-of-the-art Monterey Bay Aquarium.

"The sardine capital of the world" had humble beginnings around the turn of the century when F.E. Booth built the first fish packing plant. As the local pilchard (or sardine) became a gourmet delicacy rather than bait for salmon fishermen, demand outdistanced supply.

An Italian fisherman, Pietro Ferrante, and a Norwegian canning expert, Knut Hovden, changed the course of Cannery Row's history. Ferrante imported Italian fishing nets; Hovden modernized packing methods. The nets made it possible to scoop tons of fish with one haul.

Purse seines eventually replaced the Italian lampara nets and were capable of scooping up more fish than the smaller fishing boats could carry! World War II created a new boom for Cannery Row, which by now boasted a number of small groceries and other businesses tucked in among the canneries, as well as the biology laboratory of Ed "Doc" Ricketts.

In 1945, Cannery Row packed more than 235,000 tons of sardines in 19 operating canneries. But there were some pessimists among the fish-packing optimists — marine biologist Ed "Doc" Ricketts, among them. He warned that overfishing might destroy the entire industry.

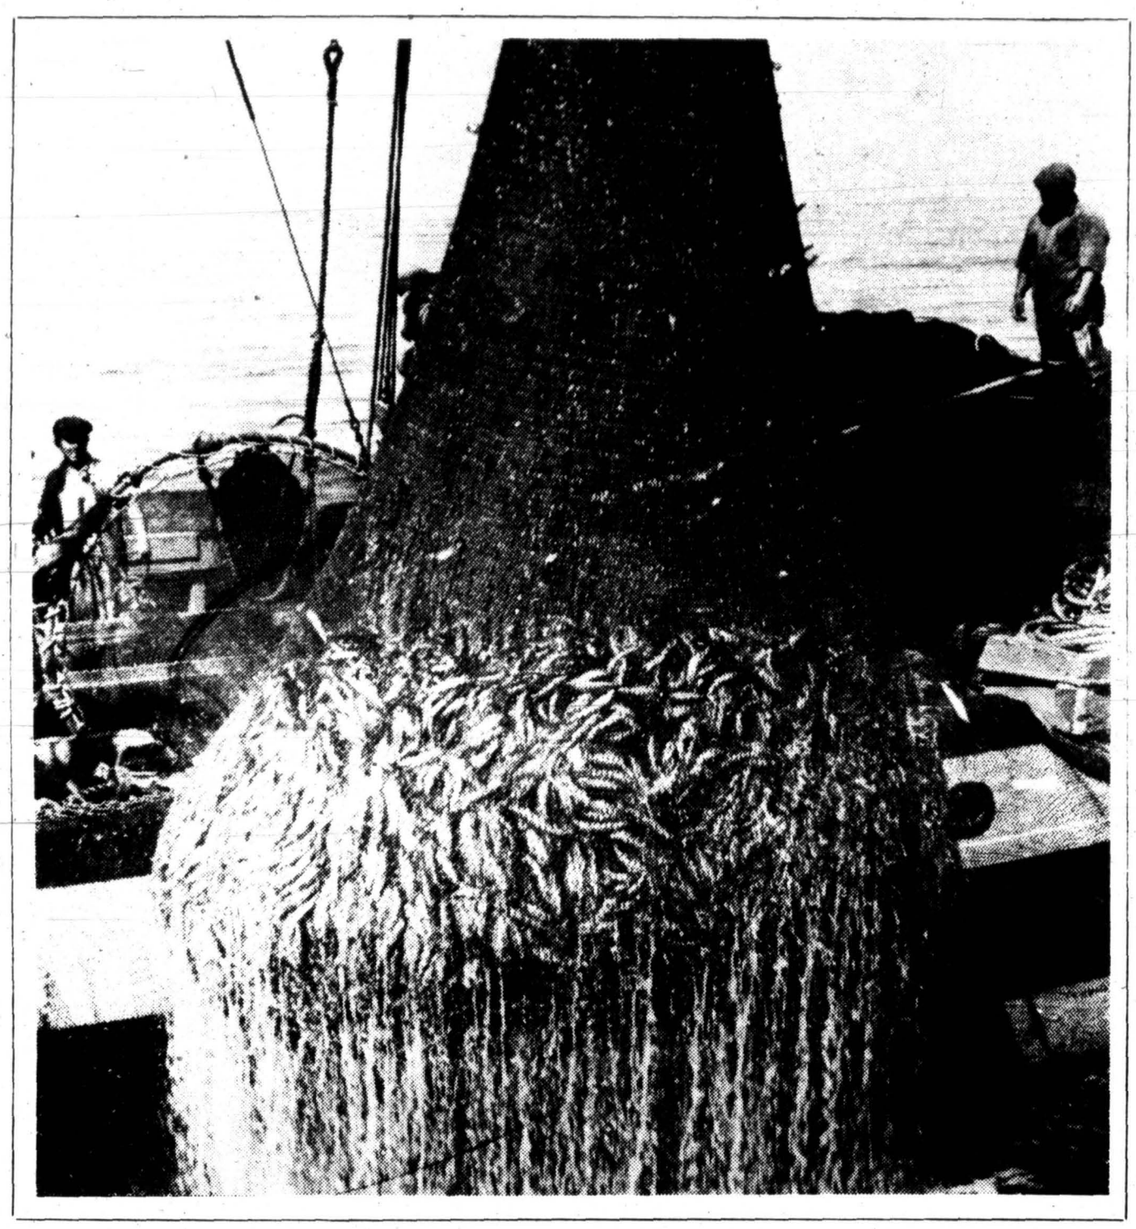
In 1946, Cannery Row packed 142,000 tons; by 1948, only 14,000 tons were processed. And in 1951, after a brief comeback, there were no sardines at all. Doc Ricketts maintained they had all gone into cans.

As the canneries closed, they fell into ramshackle disrepair and were frequently destroyed by uncontrollable fires.

There are still enough of the hulking cannery buildings, however, and the overpasses that cross Cannery Row, to retain the flavor, if not the aroma, of the past. That the canneries now house restaurants and art galleries makes them all the more accessible and interesting; after all, who would visit a sardine packing plant?

The shorefront restaurants offer fine food and a view of the still-abundant wildlife of the bay — sea otters frolicking in the kelp beds, gulls of all kinds, pelicans, sleek seals and sea lions and even skin divers on their bobbing yellow rafts.

No longer is Cannery Row deserted after dark. Now there are bright lights, laughter and the sound of music. Visitors can enjoy a variety of entertainment in restaurant cocktail lounges and there are several spots that offer dancing to live music.



ONCE KNOWN as "The Sardine Capital of the World," Monterey's Cannery Row is now home to restaurants, shops and the world-famous Monterey Bay Aquarium. (Photograph courtesy the Pat Hathaway Collection — California Views.)
